

Spring 1976

As Brancusi Said at an Earlier Hour

Peter Balakian

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank>

 Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Balakian, Peter (1976) "As Brancusi Said at an Earlier Hour," CutBank: Vol. 1 : Iss. 6 , Article 32.

Available at: <https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss6/32>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mail.lib.umt.edu.

AS BRANCUSI SAID AT AN EARLIER HOUR

for Doug Bennett

Ben. I never made it back to that bar in Elmira where you and that thug Fitzie used to end weekends in rage.
Where you crowned your girl with broken glass and washed the body from your hands. Every mirror broken and still your face whole in each frame.
And that last headpiece you made from rusted lead. They believed you'd pillage every town from Elmira to the border and disappear into the North wood waiting for the second coming.

They say you were unrecognizable.
Steel twisted around your arms,
handlebars locked around your head.
When I went back, your room still stunk of clay and wet cloth.
Nothing untouched. Beer cans
in the toilet and that selfless portrait without eyes dug into the plaster.
Everything was still except one woman on the sill, your hand half-pulled from her head and her eyes
still waiting for you to attack them.