FOR RELEASE THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 18

HSU ORIENTATION WEEK BEGINS SUNDAY

Entering freshmen at Montana State University will arrive in Missoula Sunday to begin a busy round of activities designed to have them officially registered and completely at home on the campus by the time classes start on September 29, University officials announced.

This period preceding the opening of fall-quarter classes is termed orientation week and is devoted to helping students complete the registration process and to introducing them to college life, according to A. C. Cogswell, dean of students. University administrative officers, faculty members, and upperclassmen cooperate in the program.

On Monday freshmen will be briefed on registration procedures and on other activities planned for them during the week. On the agenda are placement and aptitude tests, physical examinations, conferences with faculty advisers, campus tours, and social events. Actual registration for freshmen will take place in the Field House on Friday.

New students are urged to arrive on the campus as early as convenient on Sunday, Dean Cogswell said. Transfer students from other universities or colleges should arrive on Tuesday, and former HSU students on Wednesday, he added.
