When the Phone Rings at Night

Tom Rea

birds settle blackly on the line outside and listen in: sly chirps behind the words a friend is drunk it's three AM, bars closed, and what am I doing? Dazed, my wife says "geese in the fall", her arm becoming fact on the bedclothes, her shoulders rolling.

Out there something waits for shape something in the night like cat fur rises to the brush of a hand.

The birds get louder. I'd tell him don't talk, we're tapped, but he might come over. Rivers run between us fast under a thin ice-glaze. The ice could crack, he'd drown, and who'd be guilty? Air hisses on the line.
My wife shifts. The birds have flown off bored, but if the night had wings or arms it would soften at their cries, and open, open.
