Fall 1978

Holding On

Patricia Clark

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Clark, Patricia (1978) "Holding On," CutBank: Vol. 1 : Iss. 11 , Article 23.
Available at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss11/23

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.
You dreamed of fish with white meat, white teeth, all gnashing: shark, cod, halibut, a sullen dogfish. Your skull throbs from last night's booze. Flip the switch and face a firing squad of light.

Maybe tomorrow you'll sleep forever, nestle down into yourself and look for the thing you've lost. Under a mound of warm quilt you're buried in dreams.

Rituals of morning, of rising, of bacon grease snapping at your wrists, warmed-up coffee black as sky. You wish you were tougher, that your face wouldn't feel walked on. Even the slender lilac makes it through winter. Shiver in morning air as you go out, with empty hands, nothing more sure than a steering wheel to hold onto.