Spring 1979

Again

Mark Rubin

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.
Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Rubin, Mark (1979) "Again," CutBank: Vol. 1 : Iss. 12 , Article 10.
Available at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss12/10

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mail.lib.umt.edu.
AGAIN

I had no delusions frogs were more than frogs.
Standing in the green light
they gave, how beautiful, their subarcticual pads. I knew they held back

one word, and know
we die one word too soon.
One sound waves into another.
I don't know where it ends though

I believe in Ohio, two lives move close to what they hear.
What one thinks, the other sighs
how one frog will dive and not come up.

Watching where they've gone,
I brush the water after them.
Here is the one who believed he was no better than this dreams, and dreamed of tugboats, the man on deck staring in the water where the water moves on the other side, the face imagined, the face inside.

Here he is again. The one who became what he loved, and loved so far beyond himself there were no words to contain it,
how simple, the tympanic membrane.