Spring 1980

A Wind Will Come from the South translated by Patsy Boyer and Mary Crow

Circe Maia

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss14/48

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mail.lib.umt.edu.
A WIND WILL COME FROM THE SOUTH

A wind will come from the south with unleashed rain to beat on closed doors and on the windows
to beat on faces with bitter expressions.

Happy noisy waves will come climbing paths and silent streets
through the port district.

Let the hardened city wash its face its stones and dusty wood, worn out its heart sombre.

Let there be surprise at least in the opaque
taciturn glances.
And let many people be frightened, and the children laugh
and the greenness of the water's light wake us bathe us, follow us.

Let it make us run and embrace each other and let the doors of all the houses open and the people come out
down the stairs, from the balconies, calling to each other . . .

translated by
Patsy Boyer and Mary Crow