COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course explores why humans think, feel, and act the way they do, in the realm of politics. In political science we use psychological concepts and theories to understand and analyze politics, yet we often use these ideas unsystematically and at times uncritically. As a result we understand less about many political phenomena than we should, and debates within political science about how to analyze events and why they happened are difficult or impossible to resolve. This course directly examines core psychological concepts as used in political science in order to reduce this source of analytic confusion, and to increase our awareness of how these concepts are used analytically in political science.

While studying any aspect of politics in some way requires us to think about human psychology, in this course we focus on psychological explanations of politics: explanations about the individual (personality, learning, cognition, emotion) - and individuals’ environments (information social influences, and group dynamics). The course is roughly divided into two sections. The first half of the course explores a range of concepts and theories with some applications of the theories. The second half of the course uses the concepts and theories to explore in greater detail some of the more politically important questions about political leaders, individuals, social groups, and societies as a whole. By the end of the course students should be able to apply the major psychological concepts and theories in evaluating human political thinking and behavior.

READINGS: There are no textbooks for this course. All readings will be available on electronic reserves (ERES) at the Mansfield Library, and are listed individually in the “Course Topics and Readings” section below. Depending on the progress of course, I may change some of the topics and readings to reflect political events and your interests. The ERES password is __________. Students should also be regular and critically aware consumers of news coverage, which provides a constant source of raw material for analyzing human thought and action. See note below on The News.

GRADES AND REQUIREMENTS: The course material for this class is varied, complex and theoretical, and the concepts are often unfamiliar to political science students, so it’s important to be engaged with the material by attending class, keeping up with the reading, and thoughtful participation. Our discussions and lectures will sometimes cover material not in the course readings, and all lecture and reading material may be covered on the exams. Ergo, participating in discussion and doing well on the exams requires keeping up with the readings, and there will be several unannounced written reading reflections on the current readings (aka “quizzes”) during the semester. These pop quizzes/reading reflections are 5% of the course grade and cannot be made up if missed, so read thoroughly, take notes as you read and prepare questions!

Class participation is also an important part of the course and course grade. One of the most important forms of class participation is asking good questions (in addition to contributing your own insights and your answers to others’ questions, including mine). If you have questions about the readings, lectures, or discussions (e.g., an interesting, baffling, or unclear point in a reading) you should ask them; preparing questions about the readings (and trying to answer them yourself) will help you get the most out of them. Frequent and intelligent participation in class discussion is 5% of the course grade. Another crucial part of discussion is respecting others in class and their perspectives. This is especially important as we explore the sometimes intellectually and emotionally challenging topics and material in this course. There will be two or more short papers based on various topics and exercises (some out of class). Each short Paper will be 5% of the course grade. If more than two papers are assigned the percentage weight of one or both exams and/or the research paper proportion of the grade will be lowered.

There will be two exams: a midterm and a final. The final will be comprehensive but weighted toward the material in the second half of the course. Both exams will have material from both lectures and readings.

There will be a focused research paper of 6-8 pages in length that will provide you an opportunity to do an original research project, applying psychological theories and concepts to a topic of your choosing related to current or past political events. The specific requirements of the paper will be provided later in the semester.

Grades: Grades will be calculated according to the following percentages:

Short papers (5% each, 2-4 papers) 10-20%
Participation in discussion 5%
Written Reading Reflections 5%
Midterm exam 25%
Research paper (8-10 pages) 25%
Final exam 30% of course grade
(If more than two short papers are assigned the percentage weight of the paper and/or exams in the overall course grade will be lowered).

The short papers, midterm and final exams, and the research paper must be completed and turned in on time in order to pass this course.

PSCI 400:
Undergraduate students taking the 1-credit PSC 400 Advanced Writing course will write a two-page research proposal and complete a draft of the research paper, both of which I will provide comments on. Based on the draft comments students will revise the paper into final form (due one week after the draft is returned). The final version of the paper will be 10-12 pages instead of 6-8, and graded on writing clarity and organization as well as content. First drafts will be due one week before the draft is due for the rest of the class.

Academic Honesty And Plagiarism:
All students must practice academic honesty. Academic misconduct is subject to an academic penalty by the course instructor and/or a disciplinary sanction by the University. All students need to be familiar with the Student Conduct Code. The Code is available for review online at http://life.umt.edu/vpsa/student_conduct.php

The University of Montana Student Conduct Code prohibits plagiarism, which is "representing another person's words, ideas, data, or materials as one's own." This is a serious academic violation that can result in penalties up to suspension or expulsion from the University. I take academic honesty very seriously, and will do my utmost to prevent, uncover, and penalize any form of cheating in this course. See the UM plagiarism warning at http://www.umt.edu/catalog/acad/acadpolicy/default.html and the Student Conduct Code at http://life.umt.edu/vpsa/student_conduct.php

Please contact me if you have any questions or concerns about academic honesty.
CLASS COURTESY:
In order to have a pleasant and effective learning environment in class, we need to observe a few basic courtesies. This is a fairly small campus, so it is possible to get to the classroom on time from all other campus buildings; arriving late or leaving early disrupts the class and disturbs other students and the instructor. Please turn off all cell phones and all electronica before class begins, and don't read a newspaper or other non-course material, use text messaging, web browsers, or similar electronic communications. If you have a question or comment about the material, please raise your hand so we can all discuss it, instead of talking to your neighbor. We'll all benefit if we just keep in mind the reason we're in the room together.

DROP POLICY AND INCOMPLETES:
You can drop classes on Cyberbear until February 15 at 5 pm. From February 16 until April 8 you can drop using a drop slip signed by me and receive a “W” grade. After April 8, you must go through the more formal and difficult “late drop” petition process, requiring signatures from me, your advisor, and the Dean, and are granted only in the circumstances stated at http://www.umt.edu/catalog/acad/acadpolicy/default.html under “Beginning the forty-sixth...”; students will receive a “WP” or “WF” grade.
Incompletes will only be permitted when all the conditions set forth in the official University policy are met – the policy is at http://www.umt.edu/catalog/acad/acadpolicy/default.html under “Incomplete Grade Policy”

DSS STUDENTS:
Qualified students with disabilities will receive appropriate accommodations in this course. Students with disabilities requesting accommodations on exams, papers, or other course requirements should contact me as soon as possible, and must contact the DSS office in order to arrange for and provide to me a letter of approval for accommodations from DSS. The DSS office is in Lommasson Center 154.

E-MAIL AND MOODLE:
Every registered UM student has an official UM e-mail account, and students registered for this course have a Moodle course account. I may use your official UM e-mail to send you important announcements, and the exam and research paper grades will be posted on Moodle. See http://umonline.umt.edu/ for instructions on how to access your UM e-mail and Moodle accounts.

GRADUATE STUDENTS
Graduate students taking this course must complete additional graduate-level readings for each course topic as specified by the instructor, and must complete a longer (20-25 page) research paper incorporating 1) a research design focused on a research question and hypotheses that incorporate at least two psychological theories, 2) an extensive literature review, and 3) an analysis that synthesizes these components.

THE NEWS
This is an election year, so there will be (and already is) a lot of discussion and controversy about political participation. Students should be regular and critically aware consumers of media coverage relating to participation, which means you should follow the news coverage in a major newspaper or other rich sources on da daily basis. The New York Times and The Washington Post are two of the best in news coverage and the Post’s website is free. The NY Times is available on Lexis-Nexis through the Mansfield Library website. The Wall Street Journal has less political news coverage but it is also very good. It is only available free on Factiva, through the Mansfield Library website. Other sources of news can provide a useful contrast with and supplement to newspaper reading, although most television and radio sources, for example CNN and FoxNews provide only superficial coverage of political news.
