FOR RELEASE WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14

Three June graduates of the Montana State University Law School have won appointments as law clerks to the Montana Supreme Court and two have been tapped as clerks to federal judges, Dean Robert E. Sullivan reported.

Appointed to one-year terms with the Montana Supreme Court are Eugene I. Brown, Great Falls; Donald J. Beighle, Deer Lodge, and Carroll E. Multz, Missoula.

Entering government service are Arthur W. Ayers Jr. of Billings, who will work for the Water Pollution Board, Washington, D. C., and Thomas F. Dowling of Missoula, who will be legal adviser to John Holmes, ex officio state commissioner of insurance and securities. Keith L. Burrowes of Polson will serve as Poplar city attorney and also engage in private practice.

Graduates who will practice in their home towns are A. Evon Anderson, Fort Benton; Roy C. Rodeghiero, Roundup; Nile E. Aubrey, who will be associated with Frisbee and Moore, Cut Bank, and Lino A. Marsillo, who will enter the office of John Patterson, Missoula.

Also entering private practice are John A. Alexander of Missoula, who will join the Butte firm of Johnson and Johnson; Melvyn M. Ryan of Missoula, who will join Church, Harris, Williams and Johnson of Great Falls, and James L. Sansaver of Wolf Point, who will practice in Fairview.

John W. McDonald Jr. of Bozeman will join the MSU faculty to teach business administration, business law and insurance. Thomas K. Haney of Butte will complete a six-month tour of military duty before launching his law career.
