FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The appointment of Prof. Edwin L. Marvin as chairman of the Montana State University Philosophy Department has been announced by Dr. Robert W. Coonrod, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Prof. Marvin, a member of the philosophy faculty since 1937, succeeds Prof. Henry G. Bugbee Jr., who headed the department from 1958 until his resignation at the end of the school year.

After receiving a bachelor's degree from Central College in Missouri, Prof. Marvin took a master's degree at Harvard University and did further work there under an Austin Teachers' Fellowship. He has taught at Central College, the University of California at Berkeley and Amherst College and has written articles for the Encyclopaedia Britannica Yearbook.

Although Prof. Marvin has spent most of his time in the rarefied air of philosophy, he is no stranger to the more practical world of sports, journalism and business. As an undergraduate at Central College he captained the basketball team and won a letter in baseball. He worked as a reporter for the Fayette (Mo.) Advertiser and served for six years as college representative for the D. C. Heath Publishing Co.
