FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

A change in the tentative times announced for the telecast in this area of a National Broadcasting Co. course in American government has resulted from the network's return to standard time, according to Troy F. Crowder, director of extension at Montana State University.

The course, "The Structure and Functions of American Government," will be seen Mondays through Fridays from Sept. 25 through Jan. 26 over KMSO-TV, Missoula, from 12 to 12:30 p.m. and over KHQ-TV, Spokane, via cable, from 9 to 9:30 a.m., MST, Crowder said.

MSU will offer four quarter hours of college credit to persons who register through the Extension Division, according to Crowder. Registrants will be required to attend four meetings on campus for discussion and tests and will be given a final examination at the conclusion of the course.

Dr. Peter Odegard of the University of California Political Science Department will teach the television classes, and Dr. Thomas Payne, chairman of the MSU Political Science Department, will administer the course locally.
