FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The Montana Cable Television Association has established a $150 annual scholarship in educational television at Montana State University, Andrew C. Cogswell, dean of students, announced.

The scholarship was set up "to encourage young people to explore and develop the educational potential of the television medium," according to Robert Magness, Bozeman, president of the association.

Junior, senior and graduate students who have exhibited an interest in educational television are eligible for the scholarship, Dean Cogswell said.

The recipient will be selected by the University Scholarship Committee acting upon recommendations from a committee made up of the deans of the Schools of Education and Journalism, the director of the MSU Radio-Television Studios, and a member of the Scholarship Committee.
