FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Ogden Nash, Margaret Mead, Barry Goldwater and Marquis Childs are the remaining speakers in the Montana State University lecture series this season, according to Dr. Ralph Y. McGinnis, chairman of the MSU Public Lecturers Committee.

Nash, whose verse has been tickling American risibilities for years, will speak Feb. 6. Miss Mead, the noted anthropologist, will lecture at 1 p.m. Mar. 29, and Sen. Goldwater, articulate spokesman for the conservative wing of the Republican Party, will speak the same date at 8 p.m. Childs, nationally syndicated political columnist and novelist, will lecture April 12.

The 14 lecturers who have already appeared plus the four additional speakers and a Charter Day speaker to be announced will bring the total participants in the current series to 19, the chairman noted.

The lectures are open to the public without charge, Dr. McGinnis said, but persons wishing to contribute to the support of the program may send checks to the MSU Endowment Foundation. They should note on the check or in an accompanying letter that the contribution is for the Visiting Lecturers Program, he said.
