FOR RELEASE THURSDAY, MARCH 8

Two three-credit workshops in home economics are scheduled at Montana State University this summer, Mrs. Emma Briscoe, department chairman, announced.

A workshop in fitting techniques and teaching problems will be in session June 12-22, followed by a workshop in advanced clothing construction June 25-July 6.

Mrs. Louise Mast Trammell will conduct the first week of the workshop in fitting techniques, using lectures, demonstrations and laboratory work to teach principles of fitting. Mrs. Trammell has studied with Mrs. Bishop at the University of Syracuse and has spent her full time for the past several years conducting Bishop workshops on college campuses.

Mrs. Vanetta Lewis of the MSU home economics faculty will conduct the second week of the workshop, which will deal with curriculum considerations of new methods of clothing construction and other problems confronting home economics teachers, extension agents and others working in adult education.

Mrs. Briscoe will direct the workshop in advanced clothing construction. The workshop will consist of lectures, demonstrations and laboratory work in new methods of dressmaker and tailoring techniques.

Enrollment in the workshops must be limited, and preference will be given to applicants engaged in home-economics education, Mrs. Briscoe said. Details about registration are available from Mrs. Briscoe, Department of Home Economics, Montana State University, Missoula.
