Margaret Mead and Senator Barry Goldwater to speak at Montana State University on March 29
For release Thursday, March 22

Two headline attractions are scheduled March 29 in the Montana State University lecture series, Dr. Ralph Y. McGinnis, chairman, announced.

Anthropologist Margaret Mead will speak on "Some Contrasts of East and West" at 1 p.m. in the University Theater, and Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) will talk on "Conservatism in American Politics" at 8 p.m. in the Field House.

Sen. Goldwater, frequently mentioned as a contender for the 1964 Republican presidential nomination, was elected to the Senate in 1952 and won a second term in 1958. Senate committees on which he serves include Labor and Public Welfare, Interior and Insular Affairs and Select Committee on Improper Activities in the Labor or Management Field. He was chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee from January 1955 to February 1956 and was re-elected chairman in January 1959.

He was active in local politics before taking his Senate seat. He was elected to the Phoenix City Council in 1949 and re-elected in 1951.

Goldwater attended Staunton Military Academy and the University of Arizona. He started working for the Goldwater Co. in 1929 and is now chairman of the board of the firm.

The senator was a pilot in the U.S.A. Air Force from 1941 to 1945 and a colonel in the Arizona National Guard from 1945 to 1952. He is now a general in the U.S.A. Air Force Reserve.

Dr. Mead is associate curator of ethnology at the American Museum of Natural History, New York, and adjunct professor of anthropology at Columbia University. She won national prominence in 1928 with the publication of her first book, "Coming of Age in Samoa."

(more)
Mead and Goldwater Speak at MSU March 29

Her 10 books since 1928 include "From the South Seas," "And Keep your Powder Dry," "Male and Female," "Soviet Attitudes toward Authority," "An Anthropologist at Work," and "People and Places." She has co-authored and co-edited seven other books on primitive and contemporary cultures.

Dr. Mead mastered seven primitive languages in order to pursue her studies of native peoples of the Pacific islands. In recent years she has been studying contemporary cultures in the light of the perspective gained from her knowledge of small, homogeneous and stable societies.

Her achievements have won her honorary doctorates from Wilson College, Rutgers University, Elmira College, Western College for Women and the University of Leeds, England. She earned M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from Columbia and a B. A. from Barnard College. She is past president of the American Anthropological Association and of the World Federation for Mental Health and a member of other professional societies.

Both Sen. Goldwater and Dr. Mead have lectured extensively on college campuses throughout the country.

###