Headlining the staff teaching summer courses in business education at Montana State University will be Howard Newhouse, professional service specialist for the Gregg Publishing Co., according to Mrs. Brenda F. Wilson of the MSU School of Business Administration.

Newhouse will give demonstration lessons in 1963 system changes in the Gregg Shorthand Diamond Jubilee Series and in Gregg notehand, June 17 through 21, Mrs. Wilson said. The course, "Problems in Teaching Shorthand," offers two credits.

Other unit courses scheduled are "Gregg Shorthand Theory for Teachers," three credits, June 24 - July 5, taught by Mrs. Wilson; "Problems in Teaching Bookkeeping," three credits, July 8 - 19, and "Office Machines Practice," two credits, June 17 - July 19, taught by Miss Alvhild Martinson.

Newhouse teaches at IBM World Headquarters and at Hunter College, New York City. He is co-author of shorthand and transcription texts and editor of Business Teacher Magazine. He has taught at George Washington University and the U. S. Armed Forces Institute, Guam, and has conducted workshops at more than 50 universities.

Mrs. Wilson, professor of business administration at the University, is one of 25 teachers experimenting with the functional method of teaching Gregg shorthand. She holds a bachelor's degree from MSU and an M. A. from the University of Southern California and has done graduate work at the University of Chicago and New York University.

Miss Martinson taught in Montana high schools before joining the MSU faculty in 1949. She earned a bachelor's degree at State Teachers College, Minot, N. D., and a master's degree at MSU.

Students may register for one to five weeks of work in business education from June 17 to July 19 and earn from two to eight graduate or undergraduate credits toward a degree in business or education. The school also offers summer courses in insurance, advertising, personnel management, marketing, taxation, accounting and finance.
