Poem After Cesar Vallejo

Boyd White
Poem After Cesar Vallejo

The sorrow that splits the handle of the hoe and buries the day under a rotting stump; the sorrow of the disappeared appears only at dusk and makes its way carefully from room to room.

The sorrow that stains the palms of butchers in the market and paints cobblestones the true color of the sun;
the sorrow of the tired singes sweat into the skin and collects the hair of the dead in small, deep sacks.

The sorrow that laces women’s shoes in the morning and scrubs tea stains from the bottom of chipped cups;
the sorrow of the lonely shies away from mirrors and hides with the beetles under the front steps.

The sorrow of the breath of men at sunrise spills forth all their days like spit from their tongues;
the sorrow of the defeated stitches its clothes from the evening and bends tree limbs into elegies with birds who visit the dead.

Boyd White