Spring 1991

Evening Encounter

Mervin Mecklenburg

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss35/14

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.
Evening Encounter
-Sacrifice Cliff, above Billings, Montana

I cannot say what brought me to this edge from the distant streets below, where the moon dimmed by the lights, tangles in telephone wires. I look down on the shadowy nighthawks circling above the smashed Ford Coupe at the bottom, and envy those old warriors, the two who rode their ponies into the air off this cliff, a last attempt to appease whatever was killing their families with smallpox.

What a clean break, I think. One plunge and all the world is purged. But when I turn and meet them, standing again, they seem to reproach me, their ribs sticking out like quills.
Pale grey in the glow of the city below, their mouths gape as if trying to explain how the earth abandoned their ponies' hooves, and the rocks far below grew toward them, like scabs from the ground.

Mervin Mecklenburg