FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Joseph A. Mussulman, assistant professor of music at Montana State University, has been reappointed a Danforth Teacher for 1964-65, according to William David Zimmerman, assistant director of the Danforth Foundation, St. Louis, Mo.

Mussulman, director of choral organizations at MSU, is one of 43 college faculty members in the United States to receive reappointment grants. The grants are part of the Danforth Teacher Study program established in 1954 to enable men and women serving full-time on college faculties to complete graduate study.

Mussulman's grant, his third, will enable him to take leave from his faculty post in 1964-65 and continue work toward a doctorate in humanities from Syracuse University. He will remain on campus to do research in the MSU Library for his doctoral dissertation. He used his initial Danforth grant, for the 1961-62 academic year, for graduate work in residence at Syracuse, which he also attended in the summer of 1963 under a second Danforth grant.

Before joining the MSU faculty in 1957, Mussulman taught at St. Cloud Teachers College, Ripon College, and Northwestern University. He holds bachelor and master of music degrees from Northwestern.
