FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The establishment by the Jewish Chautauqua Society of a limited resident lectureship in Judaism at Montana State University has been announced by the Rev. Tosh Tatsuyama of the affiliated School of Religion at MSU. The society sends rabbis to colleges and universities to interpret Judaism on an academic level, he said.

Dr. Samuel Horowitz, rabbi of Temple Beth Aaron in Billings, will give the Judiaca course, which is believed to be the first such course carrying college credit in the Pacific Northwest. The visiting lecturer will launch the series spring quarter 1965 with a course on "The Teachings of the Hebrew Prophets." The lectures are scheduled for Mondays and Tuesdays for 10 weeks. It is hoped the course will eventually be expanded to include the autumn quarter, Dr. Tatsuyama said.

Dr. Horowitz' appointment was authorized by the State Board of Regents, Dr. Tatsuyama added.
