4-8-1965

Kenneth V. Lottich completed study of westward movement of American civilization

University of Montana--Missoula. Office of University Relations

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/newsreleases

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Dr. Kenneth V. Lottich, professor of education at Montana State University, has recently completed a comprehensive study of the westward movement of American civilization, "New England Transplanted."

The new book is a story of the transfer of Eastern civilization to the new West. It is a study of the cultural transplantation with special emphasis on schools and other education devices.

Dr. Lottich spent time in Connecticut and Massachusetts learning the New England culture which became the basis for much of the West's development.

Educators and sociologists would be particularly interested in "New England Transplanted," Dr. Lottich believes.

Dr. Lottich is co-author of "Behind the Iron Curtain," and "The Foundations of Modern Education" and has contributed to "Encyclopedia of Relevant Information" and "Heritage of American Education." He also has written numerous articles, reviews and monographs.

#