FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, JUNE 20

Nearly 60 visiting professors will join 124 members of the regular faculty in staffing the Montana State University summer session, which opens Monday, Dean Robert W. Coonrod, director, announced.

The session is organized in four time segments: A nine-week session, June 21 through August 20, covering a full quarter of university work; a half session, June 21 through July 21; a second half session, July 22 through August 20, and a mid-session, July 8 through July 21.

The mid-session was introduced this year primarily to give teachers in parts of the country where schools close later than those in this area ample time to travel to Missoula for summer academic work, the dean said.

In addition to courses offered in the four basic time units, a number of short courses, workshops and seminars are scheduled during the nine weeks. The summer program at the Biological Station at Yellow Bay will run from June 21 through August 13.

The visiting faculty will include Dr. Benjamin Willis, superintendent of schools in Chicago; Dr. Alan P. Merriam of the Indiana University Anthropology Department, son of Dr. and Mrs. Harold G. Merriam of Missoula; Dr. Erika Fromm of the University of Chicago Psychology Department; Dr. William A. Stafford of the English Department at Lewis and Clark College, Portland, Ore.; Victor Alessandro, conductor of the San Antonio Symphony Orchestra; Dr. Frederick L. Darley of the Mayo Clinic Speech Pathology Section; Dr. Lucie I. Lawson of the School of Dentistry, University of California Medical Center, San Francisco.
