November 13 named Foresters' Day

University of Montana--Missoula. Office of University Relations
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

November 13 will be Foresters' Day in Montana by gubernatorial proclamation and also the foresters' day at the University of Montana in Missoula.

Gov. Tim Babcock proclaimed the Saturday as Foresters' Day in recognition of the persons who manage and preserve thousands of acres of Montana forests and importance of the forests. The date coincides with the annual Foresters Ball given by the Forestry Club at the University of Montana.

Foresters' Day in Montana will be observed with an open house Nov. 13 at the University Field House, according to Gerard D. Hertel, chief push of the Foresters Ball. Displays at the Field House will depict forestry work in Montana.
