Alzheimer's

Adrian C. Louis
ALZHEIMER’S

I’m in the waiting room and you’re in the magnetic resonance imager.
It doesn’t take an MRI to discern the red pentimento beneath the landscape of Rapid City.

I go out to smoke a cigarette.
The lushness of ripe corn, cinnamonned apple pie and cowcrap blended onto the palette of black night and then brushed over the red-necked symmetry of these squat buildings cannot hide the fact that this is Indian ground.

A night sky full of Indians died so that this arrogant little city could live.
This small pimple on the white butt of America is haunted, truly haunted by the red ghosts of sunset, darling, but waxing political is pointless.
You’re having your brain scanned so we can know for sure if you’re spinning a cocoon for your new empty mind.
