CONCEPTION

I will collapse beneath this tender task, keeping the record, the sun-stroked mantel clock, the chipped soup bowl, the hum of the dome hair dryer pouring heat from its dim sky of little holes.

My parents are making love in early spring, late in the day in her grandmother's house.

The old woman raises the empty bowl to her lips again and again, my sister deaf under the blue helmet—her hair drying to an electric rise. I am swelling and waiting, a ticking egg, a twisting tail, a fly smashing against bright glass.

I imagine her quiet breath in his ear, his hands, blood-swollen from metal grooves and sharp-toothed gears, and Jesus hung above the bed, head lolled as if to get a better angle on their lovemaking, a witness to all he missed. His wooden cross trembles against the flowered wall.

Outside the window, a bird bobs on a branch, a dog barks, a kid on skates clatters down the sidewalk like a tin train, and the daffodils give the first yellow twists within their thick green tongues.
