Direction to Points East

Rebecca Goldfarb

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Recommended Citation
Goldfarb, Rebecca (2002) "Direction to Points East," CutBank: Vol. 1 : Iss. 57 , Article 3. Available at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss57/3

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.
We found the service road was not a road.

Behind the platform a row of hedges turned the way out.
White magpies beat their wings at stale bread.
Old pools collapsed, girls chased golf balls into pine trees.
Next to a barnacle covered pipe, beside the giant rock,
by the wild bamboo and the fields of watered sod,
silver-colored fish baited themselves into buckets.

I guessed the wrong turn twice.

Dead end near the rotting mansion up this way,
the hills smaller near the harbor, the terrified gates of rich neighbors and their orange groves.
The spokes hold the wheel full of wading birds and rust the ten-speed a shade darker. When we aren’t looking,
familiar insects fly up and spell our names.