Independent Pursuit

Robert Farnsworth

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss81/11

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.
Pursuit

Stacked and locked and braced snug along the deck, freight boxes improvise upon their linkages and stress points, inside their sunovened atmospheres—staccato cadenzas, flourishes of groaning as the ship climbs and surfs indifferent swells. Manifest of time—beaten, beating out into the vast Atlantic sky. This is what we’ve been lugging, then, a thousand miles out into eternity—time—loud, erratic, yet almost musical tempo—time, manifest in the noise matter makes on its way somewhere, out here across eternity. Three flights up on the gleaming bridge, time’s a measure of space and position.

Back in Carolina, where monstrous cranes so deftly swung all these containers into place, back ashore there, time is someone’s money, units of expectation and responsibility.
Back there even the sea is working, laying quays, collecting rank larders, compiling and excavating shores.

Out here the sea is only up to itself.
No mere figure, but incomparable presence no language can use without revealing its poverty.

Originating, extravagant, a reckless beyond beyond handling, wherein the tonnage this keel heaves ahead is abstracted, and memory's cargo dwindles further into dream. Seven decks aloft in the white stern-castle, the passenger savors the sway and rise beneath him, the vast swath of northern stars, and off southeast: wild, silent lightning behind ranges of black cloud!

In the sheer spaciousness his whole body knows at last, soles to thrilled nape, out here who knows where, he's as close to longed-for self-forgetfulness as he will ever be-- awareness incarnate. Oh stop, then, he tells himself, stop making sentences of it.