Anthropology is an eclectic discipline. It covers everything related to humankind. This means that it ranges through the arts, the sciences, and the social sciences. A corresponding scope should be found in the literature of these great bodies of knowledge.

This thesis inquires into the validity of the selective pattern of anthropological information in an organized system of knowledge. Using the reference collection of the Mansfield Library at the University of Montana, each reference work is analyzed with the aim of determining if it possesses viable and usable anthropological data. These data are finally put into the format of an annotated bibliography. It is perceived that anthropological or anthropologically-related material covered the entire subject range of the reference books. The contention is that relevant anthropological material is often composed of "shadow literature", relevant works residing in books covering other subjects.

It is concluded that the subject spread of the bibliography indicates that anthropology is eclectic; that is, it borrows from its sister disciplines and that its knowledge is prevalent and infusive in an organized body of knowledge. The hope is voiced that the researcher or the student of anthropology might be made more aware of its all-encompassing nature by referring to the data in these pages.
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I appreciate the help given to be by my thesis committee. Their comments, critical, constructive, and encouraging, have made my work easier. Thanks also to the spirit of research that is found in the Mansfield Library. It has been established by past and present librarians and has provided me with an atmosphere of quiet inquiry. Thank you to my fellow anthropology students for your advice, humor, and more than occasional insights on the anthropological process. My gratitude to my family for all they have done for me, especially when my determination flagged. Finally, thank you to the spirit that resides inside and outside of us all and allows us to be creative humans.

INTRODUCTION

Anthropology is regarded as an eclectic academic discipline. It is composed of elements from different fields of knowledge. Other academic disciplines center on particular aspects of humanity but anthropology strives for the orderly elucidation of all facets of human behavior. This is accomplished through the anthropological sub-divisions of social anthropology, archaeology, linguistical anthropology, and physical anthropology. Anthropology is not only allied with other authoritative research endeavors, its scope of interests appears more inclusive as it extends to the physical sciences, life sciences, social sciences, and humanities.

Given the premise that anthropology is perceived as a universal discipline, it should logically follow that its literature should be equally pervasive. That is to say pertinent anthropological or anthropologically related data should be relatively integrated across the spectrum of organized knowledge since there are no chronological, geographical, or subject constraints to its inclusion in such knowledge.

The purpose of this thesis is to determine if the cross-disciplinary characteristics of anthropology are reflected in an organized collection of printed material. The medium for this study is the reference collection of the Mansfield Library of the University of Montana and all of the reference sources within its confines. Every reference work has been examined for anthropological content. The accumulated data from these analyses were produced in the form of an annotated bibliography. Each title within the bibliography was determined to have contained anthropological data within its pages.

These data served several uses. In the first place, they documented the extensiveness of anthropology in a defined collection of library materials. Secondly, they provided a different type of anthropological bibliography, one that departed from the standard bibliographies in that it was not restricted to the familiar sources that the user is accustomed to in such customary bibliographies. This was due to the eclecticism of the subject. Thirdly, the thesis has attempted to give many of the works entered an anthropological perspective, one in which it is supposed the original authors, editors, or compilers, in many instances, had not intended to impart to their works. Whether it was an increment from a book chapter, an anthropological interpretation of a title index, or the drawing of ethnological insights from ostensibly non-social science works, the purpose of this endeavor was to assiduously glean anthropological data or sources from these reference tools and present them in a manner in which it was hoped would send the user to the original source.

Finally, and most hearteningly, the bibliography might prove to be of possible value to anthropologists, anthropology students, and persons having a general interest in the field. It is to be hoped that there lies something within its pages for all three types of users as well as others who might find reason for reference to its contents.

As this thesis unfolded, some anomalies in library classification were encountered. Librarians have sought to point out that in the organization of knowledge by subject, an interconnectedness of information is essential for easy access to diverse literature. Some classification schemes, such as the Bliss classification, appear to fulfill this objective. But, because of historical, economic, and administrative reasons they are not utilized by most libraries (En-Anthropologists and librarians have called attention to the fact that schemes like the Dewey Decimal system and the Library of Congress system are hard put to accommodate a wide-ranging discipline like anthropology within their parameters (Amsden, 1978: 117; Rowe, 1963: 69-70). To take an example from a field related to anthropology, the Dewey numbers 131.3 (psychiatry, psychoanalysis) and 616.89 (psychiatric disorders) are widely separated in the classification listings and also on the book shelves although they have much in common from an anthropological, medical, psychiatric and psychological viewpoint. In concert with problems inherent in producing research tools to keep up with the burgeoning output of publications (Currier, 1976: 15), the imprecision of subject headings is particularly noticeable in an eclectic field like anthropology.

These, and other library classification problems, have not been addressed in this thesis due to their complexities. It is felt that another paper could be devoted to this important subject, but treatment of such pedagogical issues demands greater space than can be provided within these pages. It is important to note that these subject irregularities are not do much due to professional library treatment of the collection as to the difficulty in accommodating the tidal wave of publications within the structure of any classification plan.
This thesis is composed of individual increments of information - the annotated works. Each citation contributed toward illustrating the vibrancy of anthropology and its encompassing approach to humankind, that most fascinating of subjects. It is hoped that the user will note the myriad sources in which anthropological material can be located and its pervasiveness in the literature of the sciences, social sciences, and humanities.

Many non-traditional, non-conventional, and seemingly non-anthropologically related works were cited. This was due to an effort to cast off accepted notions of what constitutes an anthropological work. There were some hazards in this method because of the everpresent danger of adding irrelevant information or data not consistent with the objective of the thesis. It is hoped that such material, if at all included, has been kept in a minimum. Any book having useful anthropological information was chosen for the bibliographic section of this thesis. In some cases, it might have been a paragraph or a chapter; in others, it consisted of the entire source. It made for strange bedfellows and imparted a decided variation to the contents. It also illustrated the comprehensiveness of anthropology and the way in which the discipline has permeated the spectrum of knowledge.

There were indications that this eclectic approach to anthropological bibliography is somewhat unique. A comprehensive review of existing and out-of-print anthropology bibliographies tended to confirm this view because a similarly structured work was not encountered. In addition, discussions and correspondences with colleagues at the Smithsonian Institution, the Library of Congress, the Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology, and the Chicago based Library Anthropology Research Group (LARG) brought forth the tentative realization that this eclectic bibliographic approach to anthropology had not been undertaken before.

The bibliography gave sufficient and concrete evidence of the inclusiveness of the discipline of anthropology and its integration within other disciplines. Interestingly enough, and halfway anticipated, the emphases on anthropological material across the spectrum were uneven. For example, there was a wealth of anthropological data throughout the subject of history, a closely related discipline. Conversely, there was a dearth of material in the disciplines of mathematics and chemistry. This relative scarcity of sources could be interpreted as revealing that as one gravitates toward the sciences there is an accompanying drop in the incidences of anthropological or anthropologically-related data. This in turn has posed several questions as to why such occurrences have come about in this work. Would a similar ratio appear in the collection of a larger library, say Widener Library at Harvard University? Or, would the greater number and variety of sources in such a collection tend to narrow this gap? Also, if the inference is that the highly complex mathematical symbols that are a part of mathematics and chemistry in the guise of equations and formulae are not to be found in anthropology, then it must be called to attention that similarly intricate symbolic machinations define anthropological linguistics, quantitative archaeology, and physical anthropology. But, since the present work has been confined to a comparably small reference collection, these queries and conjectures will remain intriguing questions, perhaps worthy of further research.

In this spirit, it would be hoped that this thesis will eventually be refined and expanded. A further hope is that it will, in some small way, allow a larger glimpse into the intricacies of anthropology.
METHODODOLOGY

Every book in the reference collection was critically analyzed to determine if it possessed useful anthropological information. It was decided that, for reasons of time and thoroughness, the reference collection was most suitable for content analysis. Its size and types of materials were the deciding factors. An examination of the entire library collection would have literally taken years whereas a smaller area, reflective of the collection as a whole, was looked at in a manageable time period. A reference collection is an entryway to the larger library collection as well as to material beyond the physical confines of the library. Although more general in nature, reference tools provide essential information, fundamental definitions, and bibliographic pathways to wider ranges of research and instructional material through such resources as catalogs, general surveys, guides, bibliographies, indexes, almanacs, abstracts, dictionaries, encyclopedias (general and specialized), compilations, yearbooks, proceedings and transactions, manuals, glossaries, gazetteers, festschriften, and other types of information sources.

A library reference collection, like the more general collection in the bookstacks, should be dynamic. A static collection becomes stale and, if not constantly assessed for its quality, will eventually become an impediment to scholarship and learning. It was known that some material in the bibliography would be discarded or sent from the reference area to the main collection. This would be due to newer editions of a reference work being received or a book no longer being of use to the educational mission of the university. In any event, the sources in the bibliographic portion of this thesis, although predominately in the reference collection, were subject to the forces that determine the makeup of an active collection.

Although the data in this thesis concentrate on the reference collection, it should be definitely acknowledged that a remarkable variety of anthropological books appear in the general collection of the library. Several examples might illustrate this point. Essential information can be gained from a source like the anthropological papers on the American Museum of Natural History. There are also numerous symposia, congresses, and conferences on anthropology and its sub-disciplines as well as monographic series devoted to particular aspects of anthropology, with each monograph providing information of a specialized nature. For instance, the Society of Applied Anthropology publishes a series of monographs on issues and problems concerning the non-theoretical aspects of the discipline. This material is located in the general collection. Other works, because of their format or due to their linkage to special collections within the library, are housed away from the reference area although they possess reference qualities. Some of these specialized collections are the Human Relations Area File, a cross-cultural set of microcards housed in the microform room of the library, United States government documents (such as the ethnohistorical and ethnological books published by the Bureau of American Ethnology), and the regional and area anthropological works housed in the Montana archives of the Mansfield Library.
Bear in mind that a library reference collection, although physically isolated from the larger general collection, is still connected to it by the interrelationships of knowledge. The bibliographical information in this work must be used with the thought that it gives access to other materials inside and outside the library.

The mechanical and analytical methodology used to create the bibliography was as follows. Each reference work was physically handled. This was accomplished in several steps. Initially, it was necessary to determine if anthropological information was in the source. Each title (from Dewey Decimal numbers 001 to 996) was taken off the shelf and preliminarily assessed for its anthropological content. If appropriate information was found (not data of passing interest), then the title and Dewey Decimal number were recorded.

The next stage was devoted to further content analysis designed to cull repetitive and non-essential data from the bibliography. Each book was scrutinized for anthropological terminology, appropriate subject headings, keywords, relevant authors, pertinent passages and chapters, and other textual considerations. If the work passed muster then a full bibliographic citation was entered. This included the name of the author or editor, title, Dewey Decimal number, and place and year of publication.

The third stage was concerned with annotating the selected items. An in-depth contents analysis of each book was made. The findings were annotated. The reference was critiqued.

Finally, the annotated works were reviewed with an eye toward reassessing their anthropological value. If the sources were determined to be of importance to the users of the bibliography, whether they were researchers, students, or others interested in the subject of anthropology, then the titles were grouped under Dewey subject classes to allow the user a topical approach to the material through the nomenclature of the Dewey classification system. A table of contents was compiled. This allowed a logical and consistent listing of the subjects. Thus, the user could easily refer to a specific facet of anthropology by turning to the page number of the content section.

CHAPTER II: ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY

001.3 - HUMANITIES

001.3 X H918
Humanities Index. New York: H. W. Wilson Co., vol. 1- , 1974-

An author, subject serial index to periodical articles in the humanities. Formerly called Social Science and Humanities Index. Has general and specific anthropology terms.

001.44 - SUPPORT AND INCENTIVES FOR SPEECH

001.44 C692g

A subject listing of grants in the humanities. Contains descriptive information about the granting foundations. Many of the agencies have no subject limitations. Lists sources for anthropology and archaeology funds. Most of the archaeology grants are for Old World or Classical archaeology.

001.56 - NONLINGUISTIC COMMUNICATION

001.56 X F948f

A "single work which begins to synthesize published nonverbal research". The subject index leads to more than 4,000 citations. Use the term culture to locate anthropological references.

001.56 X K44n

A well-researched bibliography containing much cross-cultural material. The first seven chapters are devoted to descriptive text, and the consecutively numbered bibliography fills the remainder of the work. Has such topics as the sociological implications of posture, notation systems (highlighting body parts), and silence as a powerful means of expression.
010 - BIBLIOGRAPHY

A civilized "little guide to the published library catalogues of the English-speaking world". Part two holds a descriptive key to the catalogs. Contains a subject index to which the user should refer for anthropological, geographical, and ethnic terms.

011 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES

011 B786b 1980

A three-volume bibliography holding "original, reprinted, in-print, and out-of-print books published or distributed in the U.S. in popular, scholarly and professional series". Use the subject index in volume one to access anthropological material. Has extensive subject cross-referencing which allows entry to myriad anthropology topics.

011 C357

A source for reprints of earlier texts. Entries are "restricted to biographies and anthologies". Citations consist of information on author, title, price, publisher, and series. An author/title list in part one locates reprinted publications of anthropologists and books about anthropology.

011 T619 1979

A four-volume bibliographical guide to book series titles. Has author/title volumes and a series/title volume. It lacks a subject index, an essential search mechanism. This complicates the search for anthropological material because the user might easily overlook such citations if an anthropological term is not the first word of the title. For instance, the user would be fairly easily assured of locating "Anthropology of the North: Translations from the Russian Sources", but might be hard pressed to find "Arizona. University of Arizona Anthropological Papers". Such circumstances tend to force a piecemeal approach for the right citation.

011 W322

A directory of American and Canadian publications and audiovisual material. Best approach for information is through its subject index in which standard relevant terms such as anthropology, archaeology and ethnology are located. Supplies pertinent data about each museum including, museum publications such as books, circulars, pamphlets, papers, slides and films. A good source for uncovering titles not usually found in more standard directories and bibliographies.

011 U58m

An annual bibliography of all monographs (books) "catalogued by the Library of Congress as parts of series". Has an alphabetically arranged list of monographic series (printed replicas of the catalog cards). Since there is no subject entry, a browsing examination of its contents is suggested.

011.02 B561

A compilation of reference book reviews submitted by reviewers to the publication, American Reference Books Annual. Has appropriate anthropology headings in the subject index and the anthropology section. Contains annotated and critical reviews which vary in length and offer perceptive comments.

011.221 I61

A two-volume author/title bibliography of books in print as of 1979. Has international coverage but is somewhat outdated because some of the books may be out of print. It lacks a subject index. This fact makes it necessary for the user to analyze the titles for anthropology terms, of which many are listed.
015 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS OF WORKS FROM SPECIFIC PLACES

015 L773

A bibliography of serial publications of foreign governments covering the years 1815-1931. It is cumbersome to use but will provide anthropological information. For example, reference to the word "Canada" will lead to the anthropological division of the Canadian Geological Survey and a code list of libraries holding its publications. The key to the code is at the front of the bibliography. Demands meticulous searching but is a good source of obscure or hard-to-find anthropological works. Since this document was published in 1932, the geo-political configuration of the world has changed and the work should be used bearing this in mind.

015.42 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS FROM ENGLAND AND WALES

The Bookseller. London: J. Whitaker & Sons, Latest year only.

A weekly British book trade magazine that has half-year supplements in the spring and autumn issues which contain subject indexes. Essentially limited to books on British, Classical, and Old World archaeology. Even these subjects are hard to locate.

015.42 B862
The British National Bibliography. London: Council of the British Bibliography, 1950-

A continuing bibliography of well documented and annotated book citations in Dewey Decimal subject arrangement. Has myriad anthropology citations.
015.42 B8623
A ten-volume cumulated bibliography of works published in England and on deposit at the British Museum. Has Dewey Decimal arrangement. Look under numbers 572 and 573 for anthropology works. Archaeological material is under 571 (prehistory) and 913 (antiquities). Also look under 575 (evolution), 390 (social customs), 398 (folklore), 290 (non-Christian religions) and 430-490 (languages other than English).

015.42 E58
A longstanding bibliographical guide. An annual summation (although some volumes cumulate a number of years) of books published in Great Britain. Look for anthropological information in the title and subject sections. Of historical as well as anthropological value.

015.42 098g
Hardbound bibliographic catalog containing valuable and obscure knowledge on anthropology and related subjects. Access is through the table of contents. Anthropology books are listed on pp. 52-52a. Archaeology is subsumed under history under the heading "the ancient world" on pp. 174-180a. Especially note the section on classical pottery on p. 174a.

015.42 R332
British Books in Print. London: Whitaker, New York, Bowker, 1874-.
An annual bibliography of British books in print. Most relevant material is found in the author, title and subject indexes. All four subdivisions of anthropology are well-represented.

015.42 W578
Whitaker's Cumulative Book List. London: J. Whitaker, 1924-.
A bibliography of books published in the United Kingdom. Use the keyword approach to locate anthropological material. Be prepared to browse for works not available through familiar terms. For example, "Ethnography of Fertility and Birth" is easily located.
under the keyword "ethnography" but a title like "Life among the Apaches" can only be found by scanning the entire work.

015.43 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS FROM GERMANY

015.43 B282

A catalog containing anthropological data. Refer to an author's name located in the subject and keyword indexes. Then, return to the main citation. In German.

015.43 D486

Contains obscure, but important, anthropological references. In German.

Deutsches Bucherverzeichnis. Leipzig: Vebverlag fur Buch-und Bibliothekswesen, 1957-.

A catalog of German book citations. Refer to the subject index for information leading to anthropology citations in the main catalog. This work is not composed in a continuous alphabetical arrangement. Every few years brings a renewal of the alphabet. A good source of foreign language anthropological material. In German.

015.43 F829d

A German bibliography containing some annotated citations on anthropological subjects. Through 1982, the anthropology material is found under "erd'und volkerkunde, reisen" (geography and ethnology, travel). Since that date, the user should look under the narrower and more appropriate focus of "volkskund, volkerkund" (ethnology, folklore). Also, look under "archaologie, vorgeschichte" (archaeology, prehistoric times). In German.
A seven-volume subject catalog. The autorenregister (author index) compliments the subject approach. This work displays a national bias by holding many works applicable only to German anthropology. There also appears to be some unevenness in coverage. For instance, it contains only one reference to Adolph Bastian but many citations to the diffusionist, Father Wilhelm Schmidt. These men were contemporaries. An important bibliography published when anthropology was establishing itself as an academic discipline. In German.

A thirty-six-volume bibliography spanning three centuries and encompassing a wide variety of subject matter including many anthropology citations. Much of the information is difficult to extract due to changes in the discipline's terminology. In gothic German script.

Annual catalog of German books in print. Arranged by author, title, and keyword. Most entries are in German but an awareness of German-English cognates will yield anthropological material to non-German reading users having access to translation sources.

A bibliographic catalog. Citations are located by subject and author. Use of cognates will allow the non-French reader to locate anthropological subject terms and citations that might eventually be located in translation indexes.
Catalogue des Livres Disponibles: Litterature & Sciences Humaines.

A bibliographic catalog. Locate citations by subject and author. Look for ethnological data in section B32, pp. 395-401. Archaeology and physical anthropology citations are in section B52, pp. 442-44. Section A10, pp. 312-23 is a potpourri of linguistic material. Examine this section closely to extract books on the subject. In French.

015.44 L777

A bibliography of French books in print. Use the subject index for accessing the contents. Subjects are arranged by the Universal Decimal System. Anthropology is under number 572, prehistoric archaeology under 571, and linguistics under 400. The keyword index (index des mots-cles) gives greater entry to the subjects. In French.

015.45 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS FROM ITALY

015.45 A849c
Associazione Italiana Editori. Catalogo dei Libri Italiani in Commercio. Milan: Italiana Editori, 1970-

Bibilographic catalog of Italian books in print. Published annually in three volumes of author, subject, and title indexes. Each citation gives author, book title, publisher, the number of pages and book price. To non-Italian readers, an English-Italian dictionary might be useful in locating anthropological sources that could be further referenced in translation indexes. In Italian.

015.46 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS FROM SPAIN

015.46 L6972

A bibliographic catalog of Spanish books with a small number published in Central and South America. Anthropology books are located in the materias (subject) table under sections 10, etnologia, and 11, linguistica, filologia. Consult the title and author indexes as well. Each citation has an identifying international standard book number. In Spanish.

015.49 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS FROM SWITZERLAND

015.494 S413

A bibliographic bulletin from the National Library of Switzerland. The subject summary in the front of each bulletin indicates that anthropological material is usually found in sections 14 and 15. In French, Italian, and German.

015.52 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS FROM JAPAN

015.52 A615

A catalog containing 274 fully annotated citations of selected books in the Japanese language. Unfortunately, very few of them concern anthropology. This work also holds a larger list of 2,000 non-Japanese monographs. Relevant material can be found by referring to the social science section of the list. In English.

015.54 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS FROM INDIA AND PAKISTAN

015.54 I39

A bibliography of books from India. Arrangement is by Dewey Decimal classification. General anthropology, social anthropology, and anthropogeography are under numbers 571-573 under the main heading "biological sciences". The 491-494 number range holds books on Indian languages. The citations have been transliterated into the Roman alphabet. A transliteration table is in the front. Somewhat dated but moderately useful.
015.54 S551i 1972
Sher, Singh and S. N. Sadhu, comps. Indian Books in Print, 1972: A Bibliography of Indian Books Published up to December, 1971 in the English Language. 2nd ed. Delhi: Indian Bureau of Bibliographies, 1972.

This is a bibliography of Indian books in print. Contains author and title indexes but lacks a subject index. Its title index can be used as a keyword locator of anthropology books and first issue journals.

015.5491 P152
Pakistan National Bibliography. Karachi: 1967-

A bibliography whose subject arrangement is by Dewey Decimal number. Look under 390 (social customs and folklore) and 400 (languages).

015.71 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS FROM CANADA

015.71 C2118
Toronto: Canadian Books in Print Committee, 1967-

A bibliography of Canadian books in print. Lacks a subject index.
Use the author and title indexes to locate anthropological citations. Not as complete as the more comprehensive Canadiana.
Primarily in English with some French titles.

015.71 C212
Canadiana. Ottawa: National Library of Canada, 1951-

A national bibliography from Canada listing "publications of Canadian origin and interest". All sub-disciplines of anthropology are represented. Follows a Dewey decimal classification format. Annually cumulated up through 1972. In French and English.

015.71 T164b
Tanghe, Raymond. Bibliography of Canadian Bibliographies. Toronto:
University of Toronto Press, 1960.

A bibliography of bibliographies. A good tool for expanding anthropological research. See sociology-folklore section on pp.
015.72 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS FROM MEXICO

015.72 A636
A well laid out and informative bibliography of Mexican books. Anthropology, archaeology, and prehistory are in the natural science section. Refer to the analytical index to pick up anthropology works in other sections. A listing of the contents of edited anthropological books is an added bonus for the user. In Spanish.

015.72 B553m
A bibliographic catalog. It has two easily used indexes for locating anthropology works. The subject index gives brief information on the works. The author index provides more data (including English translations). Such familiar names as Klukhohn, Linton, and V. G. Childe are listed, but the importance of this bibliography lies in its providing names of perhaps lesser known (to the American student) Latin American anthropologists. In Spanish.

015.73 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALO GS FROM THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

015.73 A512
American Book Publishing Record. 1876-1981. (microfiche)
A three-volume bibliography (author/title/subject) in microfiche format. Allows quick access to large quantities of books published in America. The subject index gives the greatest latitude for searching anthropological literature.

015.73 A512
This bibliography is the updated paper copy of the American Book Publishing Record.
015.73 A5122

This bibliography fills in a good portion of the book publishing record in the United States. Authors, titles and subjects are arranged together alphabetically. The word "anthropology" does not appear but literature can be located under "archaeology", "ethnology", "man", "secret societies", "folklore", "Indians", and other headings.

015.73 C971
Cumulative Book Index. New York: H. W. Wilson Co., 1898-

One of the great American bibliographies. Helps fill in the bibliographic record from the late nineteenth century to the present. A good source of earlier anthropological texts as well as present citations. Arrangement is by author and subject in one alphabet. Look under anthropology for works on that subject and note the useful cross-references to other anthropology subjects.

Books in Print: Authors, Titles, Subjects. New York: Bowker, 1978-

A bibliography that is a standard sight in most American libraries and bookstores. An indispensible source of books produced and distributed by American publishers. The author, subject and title volumes contain a plethora of anthropological citations which give full descriptions of the books, including prices. Has full subject cross-referencing. For example, in a recent volume there were twenty-two references to other anthropological terms under the subject anthropology.

015.73 S635

A useful catalog of books containing "more than 1,800 small publishers world wide". Picks up some anthropological literature not included in other bibliographies. The subject index refers to the appropriate author and title.

Trubner's bibliographical guide is important in that it lists early and mid-nineteenth century American books. Provides a record of works during the formative years of Anthropology. Look under the subjects "natural history of man-ethnology", "American antiquities", "Indians", and "languages". A reprint of the 1859 volume which was published in London.

Associations Publications in Print. New York: R. R. Bowker, 1981-

A bibliography of associations publications in print. Gives citations of publications of scholarly associations and societies. Look for anthropologically oriented associations and their accompanying list of publications. This helpful reference tool is a good source for specialized publications.

015.8 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS FROM SOUTH AMERICA

Fichero Bibliografico Hispanoamericano. Buenos Aires: Bowker Editores, 1961-

An Argentinian bibliography arranged by Dewey Decimal number. Refer to the appropriate anthropological citations under Dewey numbers 390 and 570. Has a subject index. In Spanish.

A bibliography containing book citations from South American, Central American, Spanish, and American publishers. Arrangement is by author, subject and title. Anthropology works are under numbers 390, 397, 398, 571, 572, and 573. In Spanish.

Boletin Bibliografico Argentino. Buenos Aires: 1937-

A bibliography which allows access to reports, books and serials published in Argentina. Appropriate subject headings are "antropologia", "geologia", "arqueologia y paleontologia", and "folklore". In Spanish.

015.94 - BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS FROM AUSTRALIA

015.94 A938
A bibliography of Australian books. Refer to applicable terms like anthropology and archaeology but also look under more specific headings such as aborigines. Many of the books are out-of-print.

016 - SUBJECT BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND CATALOGS

016 P214
Paperbound Books in Print: an Index to Reprints and Originals with Selective Subjects. New York: R. R. Bowker, 1956-.
A catalog and guide to paperbound books (non-hard cover). It is best used by reference to the subject index. Also has author and title indexes. See the subjects "sociology", "anthropology" and "archaeology" for pertinent information.

016 R187i
A useful guide to the papers and reports of a respected think tank. It contains abstracts of the citations. Look under the heading "anthropology" and, to a lesser extent, "social sciences". Much of the material is of an applied or sociopolitical nature.

016 R187s
Rand Corporation. Selected Rand Abstracts. Santa Monica, Cal., 1963-.
A list of abstracted bibliographic citations of Rand Corporation reports. Use the subject index to center in on anthropological information but be prepared to examine it closely for related subjects. For example, referring to the subject "social sciences" might lead to appropriate material, but more often than not, information is located indirectly. For instance, under the heading "breast feeding", in one of the more recent volumes, the abstract cited ethnicity as a strong factor in the feeding choices of mothers of Malaysian infants.
016 V567
Vertical File Index. New York: H. W. Wilson Co., 1950-

A "subject and author index to selected pamphlet material". Provides short, descriptive annotations. Good source for uncovering the more ephemeral anthropology publications.

016.01 B561w

A monumental, learned work of the highest authority. This massive five-volume bibliography of bibliographies is a treasure trove of literature on myriad subjects. Anthropology and its sub-disciplines are well represented.

016.01 B5361w 1977

A two-volume supplement to Besterman's work. Limited to bibliographies.

016 X B582

A subject listing of "substantial bibliographies" containing fifty or more citations. Anthropology subject terms are extensively cross-referenced as witnessed by numerous "see also" (other anthropologically related subjects) references under the heading "anthropology".

016.01 C7136 1962

A bibliography of bibliographies. This slim volume contains worthwhile anthropology bibliographies.
016.01 D751a

A bibliographic guide to unique holdings in American libraries. Use all possible subject headings to gain worthy anthropological information. Many entries have one or two line annotations.

016.01 D751br

Similar to American Library Resources: A Bibliographical Guide but holding relatively fewer citations.

016.05 N532

A comprehensive bibliography of serial publications received at the Library of Congress and other American libraries. This continuing work has serials arranged alphabetically. There is no subject arrangement. The use of keyword anthropology terms is recommended. Entries are coded according to the library holding the periodical in question. For instance, the periodical Anthropologist has the code "CtY". This means that Yale University has the title.

016.05 U58

The predecessor to the New Serials Titles. Can be used in similar fashion.

016.01 M242s

A three-volume bibliography. See volume two, chapters II, III, and XV for anthropological citations. Many of the books are undoubtedly out of print. In French.
016.05 B862

A British bibliography of periodicals. The preface refers to such publications as "elusive". This is an apt description because of the changing nature of this type of literature. Symbols designate which libraries hold the titles. There is no subject index so periodicals have to be searched by keyword. This presents no problem with a title like Anthropological Literature but journals lacking an initial anthropological keyword, the Journal of Indian Folkloristics for example, demand more thorough searching.

016.05 X G781s

A bibliography of serials in the humanities and social sciences. Has "concealed bibliographies", those hidden in larger works. Contains many anthropology citations.

016.0541 F875
French Periodical Index. Westwood, Mass.: F. W. Faxon Co., 1975-

A bibliography of French periodicals. Does not have an abundance of anthropology citations but has enough to warrant examination. in French.

017 - GENERAL CATALOGS

017.1 P957j

A catalog of books housed in the undergraduate dormitory quadrangle library at Princeton University. Use the table of contents to find anthropology texts. Archaeological material is under the heading "history". Linguistical works are generally not culturally oriented but such authors as Hoijer and Sapir appear. Limited, but occasionally useful.
018 - AUTHOR CATALOGS AND CATALOGS ARRANGED BY DATE

018.1 B862g

A massive bibliographic catalog of 263 main volumes and numerous supplemental volumes. It is a paper reproduction of the catalog in the main reading room of the British Museum Library, one of the great bibliographic centers of the world. Although entry is by author and title, separate subject catalogs allow a full approach to anthropology books, papers, journals and newsletters.

018.1 P232c

A reproduction of the main catalog of the Bibliothèque Nationale, a major national library. Access is difficult because it lacks subject entry. However, this is such an authoritative work it is valuable for those with a facility for the French language and a knowledge of anthropological works. In French.

019 - DICTIONARY CATALOGS

019.1 B862s

A twenty-one-volume subject catalog to the British Museum catalog. Covers subjects (anthropology included) for the years 1881-1960.

020 - LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCES

020 X L6971

A bibliographical index of library literature. A source of article citations and bibliographies from librarianship and other subjects, including anthropology. For instance, Sol Tax's Chicago based Library Anthropology Resource Group (LARG) is listed.
021 - LIBRARY COLLECTIONS

021.00971 N277r

A guide to the research collections in Canadian libraries. The Mansfield Library lacks most of the volumes. It just has volume two, number four, an issue devoted to Slavic and East European resources. Contains critical evaluations of the collections of sixty-seven libraries. Use the index for analyses of the strengths and weaknesses of anthropology collections.

021.47471 W727g

A bibliographic guide giving narrative descriptions of the research collections of this outstanding public library and its branch research libraries. Materials related to anthropology, ethnology, and folklore are on pp. 197-99.

025 - LIBRARY OPERATIONS

025.171025 U58d

A directory of archives and manuscript repositories in the United States. Best access is through the subject index. Covers historical societies as well as libraries. Some of the collections are of anthropological significance.

025.179 X N277

A register of master copies of microforms (microfilms, microfiche, microcards). The masters "can be used to produce other copies of the work". Access must be by key anthropological terms due to the fact that the microform citations are listed in alphabetical order, not subject order.

An index of cross-references to subject headings. Relates to a number of common subject indexes. For example, it shows how the term "acculturation" can also be looked up under "assimilation". The advanced anthropology student may not need to refer to it as much as the beginner - and common sense in picking subject headings will serve both - but this useful book might find a place in their research.

A bibliography of reference sources. Use both the table of contents and the title index to find suitable anthropological reference books. Although superseded by newer editions, this is still a fundamental bibliography in which to find pertinent material.

This is a directory of special libraries and information centers. The library has volume one of a three-volume set. This circumstance is not unfortunate because of the salient data is in this volume. It lists institutions such as libraries and museums, many of which are of interest to the anthropologist. Be prepared to look through the entire subject index as some institutions are not properly cross-referenced by subject. For example, the Museum of Primitive Art is located under the subject "art, primitive", but not under "anthropology".

A guide and directory to Latin American research in the United States. Entries are listed numerically and are easily located through the subject index. Useful for determining anthropological data locations.
027 - GENERAL LIBRARIES

027.04 L669s

A bibliography and guide to subject collections in European libraries. It covers Eastern Europe as well as Western Europe. Arranged by Dewey Decimal classification. Peruse the summary at the beginning to arrive at the proper anthropology classifications. Lewanski fills a bibliographic gap through the publication of this comprehensive work.

027.042 L697

A yearbook offering descriptions of facilities and collections in Irish and British institutions. Anthropological and archaeological material is found throughout the book. The special libraries and museums section appears to provide the most relevant data.

027.071 F997d

A two-volume directory of special collections in Canadian libraries. Lists several anthropology special collections. There are other, more comprehensive directories.

027.079 V262r

A list of library subject collections in the Pacific Northwest of the United States. Consult the index to locate anthropologically related information. Although this work is dated and the collections have increased and changed, it gives a good historical overview of its subject.
028 - READING AND USE OF OTHER INFORMATION MEDIA

028 B724
Book Review Digest. New York: H. W. Wilson Company, 1905-

A source which indexes and abstracts book reviews. Arranged by author surname and book title. A subject index in the back of each volume leads the user to anthropology book reviews. A good work in which to see the historical aspect of the critical reception of earlier anthropology books as well as critiques on more recent material.

028 B7243 1975

A six-volume bibliography functional mainly as a selection guide for practicing librarians. Can also be used by the student and researcher. Volumes I, II, and IV hold most of the anthropology citations.

028 M613

A subject and author bibliography. Use the appropriate anthropology headings to locate book citations. In German.

028.05 N532

A book review index from a leading world newspaper. Has five volumes. Use the subject index in volume four. Some of the reviewers were anthropologists (Mead, Linton, Kluckhohn). An important historical and often anthropologically-related document.

A guide to book review citations. Consult the subject index on p. 199 for quick access to anthropological book reviews. Look for hidden citations which might not appear under a more convenient subject term. For instance, under "modern languages, philology, and literature", there is an Estonian bibliography (citation no. 398) which contains folkloric, ethnological, and archaeological matter.

This is a concise bibliography of reference books and a compendium of critical annotated reviews of this type of material. Consult the table of contents and the subject index to find anthropological or anthropologically-related reviews which provide important analyses of recent publications.

A guide to standard sources of information. Holds a surprisingly large amount of data on anthropological literature. The subject arrangement can be a bit confusing. For instance, under the word "ethnology", eight references to other subjects are listed but the word "languages" is excluded. However, under "languages", the term "ethnology" is included. Thus, the cross-referencing of subjects is not always correct.

A well-documented bibliography of Canadian reference books. The section on Eskimo languages is of particular interest for Arctic specialists.

031 - GENERAL ENCYCLOPEDIC WORKS - AMERICAN

A first-rate general American encyclopedia. Use the index volume to locate anthropological terms.

A general American encyclopedia. Coverage appears to be less extensive than that of Collier's Encyclopedia or Encyclopedia Britannica. Use the index volume to find anthropology subject material.

031 - GENERAL ENCYCLOPEDIC WORKS - ENGLISH

A British encyclopedia produced for the "educated layman". Many articles are brief but are usually followed by good bibliographies. See the subject volume to locate the pages holding anthropological literature.

An authoritative encyclopedia. It consists of two sets, a micropedia (ready reference and index) and a macropedia (knowledge in depth). Anthropological articles and summations are interspersed throughout this work. Bibliographies accompany many articles. A scholarly work.

A comprehensive German encyclopedia. Has brief, to-the-point articles. Much of the ethnological information can be found under the descriptions of countries and geographical areas. The 1966 edition lacks an index but there is an index in the 1952 edition which is also in the reference area.

A reprint of an eighteenth century French general encyclopedia. Among other things, it gives a historical perspective of anthropology. In French.

A French general encyclopedia. It compliments its predecessors and appears more comprehensive in its coverage of anthropology. Has good illustrations and maps. Contains an index. In French.
034 L332g

A scholarly French encyclopedia. This seventeen-volume work was published in the nineteenth century. Gives insight into anthropological thought during that era. In French.

034 L332L

A six-volume encyclopedia set which was published in the 1920's. Follows the nineteenth century work. Look for anthropological terminology. In French.

034 L332n

A general French encyclopedia covering the end of the nineteenth century and the beginning of the twentieth century. Gives short definitions of anthropology concepts pertinent to that time. Has a good historical perspective. In French.

035 - GENERAL ENCYCLOPEDIC WORKS - ITALIAN

035 E56 1949

A monumental encyclopedia in which anthropology is definitively treated. Has thirty-six volumes. In Italian.

036 - GENERAL ENCYCLOPEDIC WORKS - SPANISH

036 E56

This is a massive seventy-volume encyclopedia from Spain which gives extensive treatment to various subjects. Anthropology is well-defined and the ethnology of geographical areas is described.
In Spanish.

037 - GENERAL ENCYCLOPEDIC WORKS - SLAVIC

037 B693.E

The third edition of the Great Soviet Encyclopedia (Bol’shaia Sovetskaia Entsiklopediia). Its index contains copious references to subjects on anthropology in the main volumes. It is "a faithful translation of the Soviet National Encyclopedia... and as true as possible to the meaning and content... of the original edition in Russian". In English.

050 - GENERAL SERIAL PUBLICATIONS AND THEIR INDEXES

050 N7141

A subject and author listing of periodical article citations. Anthropology is included. A standard item in most American libraries.

050 P82

A forerunner to the Reader’s Guide to Periodical Literature. It is a six-volume set of indexes which spans the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Has a subject arrangement. Many of the periodicals indexed are now defunct and the subject arrangement for anthropological journal articles lacks the terminology and refinement evident in modern indexes. Yet, it holds a good historical record of the early days of anthropology in America and is still a valid tool for researching the older literature.

050 X A792
Arts and Humanities Citation Index. Philadelphia: Institute for Scientific Information, 1982-

A sophisticated, computer-generated journal article and book citation index. It has a subject index, source index, and citation index. Detailed instructions on how to use these indexes are on the inside of each volume cover. This source holds many anthropology citations. Published by the same firm which produces the similarly structured Science Citation Index and Social Sciences Citation Index.

050 X B862

A subject index of primarily British Isles periodicals. Includes titles which are not readily available in standard American periodical indexes. Contains titles like Hertfordshire Archaeology and the County Kildare Archaeology Society Journal.

050 X I61

A massive (160 volumes) bibliographic index. Each volume consists of numerous bound parts holding author, subject and keyword indexes. Absorb the prefatory note in order to understand how to use this vital and scholarly work. Close inspection shows that it holds many anthropology citations. In German.

050 X I71

A listing of serial publications issued less frequently than the more prevalent weeklies, monthlies, and quarterlies. Holds anthropological congresses, proceedings, transactions and annuals. Has works "which constitute the twilight area" between books and serials.

050 X K19m

An annotated and critical list of magazines for libraries. Refer to its index for guidance to anthropology titles.

050 X K96s

A subject guide to periodical and review indexes. Refer to the term "anthropology" in the subject index.

A listing of American, Canadian, and British periodicals and the indexes in which they appear. Anthropology is covered.

A bibliography of periodicals. Has anthropologically related works. The latter few pages of the first volume provide the key to where these may be found. Difficult to use. In French.

An interesting subject compilation of article citations from popular magazines rather than scholarly journals. Thorough examination will bring up citations like "Seeing Back through Time with Video Graphics", a title appearing in Popular Computing magazine.

A subject and author index to article citations from periodicals of general interest. It is well known in most school, public and academic libraries. Although it contains many popular magazine titles like Time, Newsweek, and Life, as well as more subject oriented literature like Forbes, New Republic, and Science, it does index anthropology as a subject and many such citations appear. Although many of the articles are of surface value; some occasionally are of greater depth.

A subject-author index of journal article citations devoted to the literature of the social sciences and humanities. It has periodicals which are more specialized than Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. Indexes such titles as Current Anthropology, American Anthropologist, and Human Organization. It supersedes International Index to Periodicals and International Index. In 1974, it divided into two separate indexes, Social Science Index and Humanities Index.

050 X U45

A directory and guide to journals. Gives detailed information on these publications. Incisive in its approach. A valuable resource in finding out where journals are indexed.

053 - GENERAL SERIAL PUBLICATIONS AND THEIR INDEXES - GERMANIC

053 X F829db

A well-documented bibliography that commands attention. Not meant for persons who neither read nor speak German. The section called "Geschichte, Kulturgeschichte, Volkskunde" is the most propitious in which to access anthropological material.

054 - GENERAL SERIAL PUBLICATIONS AND THEIR INDEXES - FRENCH

054 X R251r

A bibliography of French periodicals. Consult the classification list for entry to the anthropological material. See sections "E4b, biological anthropology"; and "T1, linguistics". Outdated. In French.

056 - GENERAL SERIAL PUBLICATIONS AND THEIR INDEXES - SPANISH

056 X C323r

An index to South and Central American periodicals. Refer to the bibliografia escogida (select bibliography) and to the anthropological material on pp. 192-93 and 199-200. In Spanish.

056 X I39

A bibliographic index. Has a "list of English terms corresponding to the Spanish subject headings used in the index". There are scattered anthropological subjects. In Spanish.

056 X L439r

A bibliography of journal citations whose contents extend from the mid-nineteenth century to the 1930's. Has a wide range of obscure, but potentially valuable, anthropological entries. In Spanish.

056 X R425

A good, historical bibliography to regional journals. Anthropological periodicals are covered in classifications 393, 571 and 572. Outdated for current use. In Spanish.

056 X Z72g

An English language version of the above citation.

061 - GENERAL ORGANIZATIONS OF NORTH AMERICA

016 E56

An encyclopedia of associations that includes the history, membership, description, publications, and convention schedules for many associations in the United States. Refer to section 4 (scientific, engineering and technical organizations) to locate anthropological and archaeological associations. Look at section 5 (education associations) for linguistical associations.

061.1 D598

A subject index on Canadian associations. In English.

061.3 K47a

A somewhat dated list of scholarly societies. Does not include the more recently founded anthropological societies.

062 - GENERAL ORGANIZATIONS OF THE BRITISH ISLES

062 D598
Directory of British Associations and Associations in Ireland.

A directory of British and Irish associations. Although it gives short shrift to anthropological and linguistical associations, it compensates for this oversight by awarding prominent coverage to many archaeological and historical societies in those areas.

062 S416

A handbook of scientific and learned societies of Great Britain. Refer to sections IX and X for anthropological material.

068 - GENERAL ORGANIZATIONS IN OTHER GEOGRAPHICAL AREAS

068.4 D598

A truly useful reference directory for those interested in locating anthropology associations in Europe. Volume two has the most pertinent data. Lists the associations and their objectives, fields of interest and other descriptive aids.
069 - MUSEOLOGY (MUSEUM SCIENCE)

069.025 H885d

A directory listing the names, address, and types of world museums. Lacks a subject index so it is necessary to scan the text for anthropological terms. This directory is alphabetically arranged by country and covers from Afghanistan through Zimbabwe. Includes a helpful introduction and glossary.

069.058 M986m

A directory of American, Puerto Rican and Canadian museums. Lists archaeological museums and sites. Look under the term "science" for anthropological, ethnological and American Indian museums.

069.7 X C589m

An important bibliographic directory. Consists of two-volumes. Volume one specializes in museum publications and is a treasure trove of that hard-to-find, important literature on anthropology, archaeology and art. Volume two is devoted to the sciences and has paleobotanical and paleontological information.

071 - GEOGRAPHICAL TREATMENT OF NEWSPAPERS AND JOURNALISM IN NORTH AMERICA

071.3 X S818p 1979

Arndt states that this is "the most complete collection of American periodicals of the latter part of the nineteenth century, consisting of single issues of precentennial newspapers and periodicals...". Most anthropological information lies in the section called "Catalogue of Original American Books". Many of the citations are traveler's descriptions and comments, but others appear to offer more substantial anthropological material. A reprint of the 1878 edition.

071.3025 098

A directory which gives entry to a more obscure type of literature. Look under the terms "anthropology" and "archaeology" for appropriate newsletters. Newsletters are notoriously short-lived and some of the titles listed may have ceased publication.

071.44 C555

An index of newspaper articles from the Christian Science Monitor. Arrangement is by subject. Refer to the newspaper itself after locating the citation in the index. Recent lists of this publication tend to emphasize archaeology articles.

071.471 W187

An index of articles from the business newspaper Wall Street Journal. Looking by subject will uncover articles about anthropology. For instance, a recent issue referred to a critique of Ruth Benedict's The Chrysanthemum and the Sword: Patterns of Japanese Culture.

071.53 W319
The Official Washington Post Index. Woodbridge, Conn.: Research Publications, 1982-.

A yearly index of the newspaper Washington Post. Look under anthropological terms to gain access to article citations.

072 - GEOGRAPHICAL TREATMENT OF NEWSPAPERS AND JOURNALISM IN THE BRITISH ISLES

072 T583i

A newspaper index to the London Times which has an extensive subject approach to anthropology and its sub-disciplines. Also look at Palmer’s Index to the London Times (microfiche) for the eighteenth and nineteenth century anthropological articles.

091 - MANUSCRIPTS

091 X B862c.a

A catalog to the manuscript titles in the British Museum. It is not an easy source to use, but diligent searching of the subject headings will yield anthropological descriptions of the appropriate manuscripts.

091 X C666g

A guide to the manuscripts located in the archives, libraries and historical societies of Montana. There is no subject index so browsing is in order. The guide is mostly concerned with the documents of homesteaders and early businessmen, but some data on Indian council deliberations, reservation censuses and Native American land claims appear in the text.

091 X N277
The National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections. Hamden, Conn.: Shoe String Press, 1959-

A catalog of the manuscript collections in the Library of Congress. The surest method of locating anthropological material is to consult the separate cumulative index. Many anthropology subject cross-references are found. Each manuscript citation has a descriptive paragraph.

091 X W319s

A catalog and list of manuscripts at the Washington State University Library. Described as "a tool to all holdings, from single items to large collections". Holds material of anthropological and ethnological value such as tribal histories and American Indian agency correspondence.
099 - BOOKS NOTABLE FOR FORMAT

099 X G946

An alphabetical listing of microforms in print. Microforms include microfilm, microfiche and microcards. Tells where the microform is located, who publishes it and how much it costs. Use key anthropological terms to locate data. Has a decoded list of publishers in front.

100 - PHILOSOPHY AND RELATED DISCIPLINES

100 X B853b

100 X D317g

A bibliography of reference works in philosophy and works by and on individual philosophers. Since there are only scattered references to anthropology, this is of minimal value.

100 X G935b

A bibliography of bibliographies on philosophy. See the section on subject bibliographies for anthropological material. Has such terms as "man" and "social anthropology".
100 X I61b
International Institute of Philosophy. Bibliographie de la Philosophie. Paris: Librairie Philosophique, 1954-

A two-volume philosophical bibliography. Information of possible value might be found in the section called "l'homme; l'anthropologie philosophique" (pp. 471-73). Of limited use. In French.

International Institute of Philosophy. Bibliographie de la Philosophie. Paris: Librairie Philosophique, 1954-

An impressive scholarly bibliography on philosophy. Citations are annotated in English or French. Anthropological references are in the section called "philosophy of history, of culture, of education".

100 X P568
The Philosopher's Index; An International Index to Philosophical Periodicals. Bowling Green, Oh.: Bowling Green University, 1967-

A continuing index that is one of the major research resources in the field of philosophy. Use the subject index to find the anthropological citations and then refer to the author index for an abstract. Most of the material is on philosophy but careful searching will locate anthropology works such as Prescriptivism in Navaho Ethics or The Archaeology of Western Culture.

A two-volume bibliography of limited use to anthropologists or students. Something possibly might be located in the section called "l'homme--l'anthropologie philosophique" (pp. 471-73). In French.

103 - DICTIONARIES, ENCYCLOPEDIAS, CONCORDANCES OF PHILOSOPHY

103 E56

An eight-volume encyclopedia on the subject of philosophy. Also covers cognate disciplines such as anthropology. Use the volume holding the subject index to find research material. Philosophical anthropology and its German heritage is mentioned.

103 E563

A four-volume Italian encyclopedia having comprehensive coverage of philosophy and lesser attention to related disciplines. Look at p. 1867 of volume four for the subject listing called "scienze antropologiche" (anthropological science). It will lead to the listings under anthropology. See section V of the "Indice Teoretico" (Theoretical Index). This section is called "Filosofia del Linguaggio" (Philosophy of Language) and it provides some material on linguistical anthropology. Each article is signed and some have accompanying bibliographies. In Italian.

103 R329d

A dictionary of philosophy and religion. Many entries consist of short biographical sketches of philosophers and briefer ones for non-philosophers whose works bears on philosophy. Boas, Sapir, and Whorf are mentioned. Has a concise definition of philosophical anthropology. Can be used as adjunct literature in the pursuit of anthropological knowledge. Stresses Western thinkers and ideas.

103 R614h

A dictionary of the history of philosophy. It is a continuing project (currently goes through the letter "O"). Coverage is encyclopedic. Terms to look under are "anthropologie", "anthropologie medizinische" (medical anthropology), "linguistik, sprachwissenschaft", and "kulturanthropologie" (cultural anthropology). Articles are signed and have bibliographies. In German.

103 X B181d

A three-volume dictionary of philosophy and psychology. Although it is over eighty years old, it still provides interesting historical and anthropological information. Volumes one and two consist of the citations and encyclopedic articles (with the contributor's initials). It has subject cross-references. Under "man" you are advised to see "mankind", "anthropoid", "anthropology", and "evolution". Volume three, part two, consists of a "Bibliography of Philosophy, Psychology, and Cognate Subjects". Close examination of it will bring forth anthropological subjects. For instance, on one page under "evolution and religion", references are made to Frazer's Golden Bough and MacLennan's Primitive Marriage.

105 - SERIAL PUBLICATIONS IN PHILOSOPHY

105 X P815b

An annual cumulated, abstracted index. Look at the "index de concepts" (subject index). Anthropology subject headings are fairly well represented. In French.

128 - HUMANKIND

128.5 X F974d

A bibliography which covers 130 years of works on the subjects of death, grief and bereavement. Works are best approached through the subject index. Look under anthropology and its sub-headings for attitudes towards death in other cultures, mourning customs, mourning, and the sociology of death. Has both journal and book citations. This bibliography is part of a series called The Literature of Death and Dying. Several other titles in this series appear to be anthropologically oriented. Refer to the list on the past page.

131 - PSYCHIATRY, PSYCHOANALYSIS

131.34 X G8681

A nine-volume index on psychoanalytic writings. The subject index is in the last volume. Anthropologists are well-represented. Two pages are devoted to Margaret Mead. Marvin Opler, who draws connections between culture and mental disorders, is also listed. Look for the subjects "anthropology", "culture", "folklore" and "sociology". A very impressive resource.

131.3403 E34e

An encyclopedia of psychoanalysis. See the sections on "anthropology and psychoanalysis" and "psychoanalytic anthropology".

150 - PSYCHOLOGY

150 T413 1985

A thesaurus to subjects and descriptors found in the reference work Psychological Abstracts. Anthropology terms are included.

150 X B433g

A library research bibliographic guide for psychology. Anthropology works related to psychology are on pp. 86-87.

Psychological Abstracts. Lancaster, Pa.: American Psychological Association, 1927-.

An ongoing abstracted index of psychology book and journal citations. Brief subject indexes are at the back of each issue. Refer to them for anthropology abstracts. Also look at the table of contents for "social processes and social issues" and its sub-section "culture-ethnology-religion". Data from this source are also available on computer through the databases PSYCHINFO and PSYCHALERT.

An interesting annotated bibliography on the creative process. Refer to pp. 302-07 for abstracts on comparative Rorschach testing of anthropologists and other professionals.

170 - ETHICS

An encyclopedia on morals, moral systems and ethics. A good percentage of the contributors are anthropologists. Interestingly enough, the book begins with an article on the moral system of the Australian aborigines and ends with Zuni Indian morality. Excellently researched (although not exhaustive) and fun to browse through.

A four-volume encyclopedia on the specialized subject of bioethics. The subject index in volume four relates to the other volumes. The list of contributors includes Margaret Mead. This encyclopedia is the first of its kind and examines bioethical problems and studies developments "in the ethics of the life sciences and health care". Holds material of consequence to anthropology. For example, it has articles on the anthropological perspective of death and the history of medical ethics in primitive societies.

200 - RELIGION

An index of abstracts dealing with religion and theology. Most of the citations are from journal articles. The fourth issue of each individual volume has a subject and author index which refers to the other issues in the volume. The anthropological material within the text generally is on the spirituality of humankind. Archaeological data are mostly on biblical archaeology. See in particular the section on world religions and look for the subjects "ethnic religions", "comparative religion", and "cults". An examination of this section in a randomly selected volume produced an abstract on anthill worship and divination in Taiwan.

An abridged version of the six-volume Sacramentum Mundi. See pp. 880-93 for concepts of philosophical, biblical and theological anthropology.

203 E56 1917

An encyclopedia of religion and ethics. It was published in 1917 and ceased in 1927. It is still of value to anthropology because many of the contributors were anthropologists and large elements of the text have anthropological, mythological and folk knowledge. Articles are signed, cross-referenced and have accompanying lists for further reading. Contains a subject index, but this should not preclude browsing for the many excellent subject related pieces. Contains specialized articles on such subjects as ancestor worship and cult of the dead.

203 R382 1957

A seven-volume encyclopedia of theology and religion. Has occasional articles on anthropologically oriented subjects. Refer to the subject index for such material. Includes bibliographies. In German.

203 S296n

A thirteen-volume encyclopedia that "presents in condensed and modified form that great body of Protestant learning called the 'Realenklopadie Theologie und Kirch'". It is specialized work on religion and ethics but contains anthropological items that can be accessed through the subject index.
205 X A512i

A continuing index of religious material found in journals. It is an excellent index because of its deep subject coverage. Many citations have anthropological content. Also has book reviews. This work became Religion Index in 1977.

205 X G946

A guide specializing in religion and the social sciences. Has a subject index and a code of journal title abbreviations. Contains anthropological material. Archaeology citations are mostly on Old World, Biblical and Classical archaeology.

209 X I61
International Bibliography of the History of Religions. Leiden, Neth.: E. J. Brill, 1952-.

A scholarly bibliography of the history of religions. It has international coverage. The bibliographical citations are informative but they unfortunately do not include the date of the publication. The user must extrapolate the year by referring to the volume number cited. Anthropologists will be most interested in the sections on primitive and prehistoric religions and on the sociology of religion. The sections on minor religions also unearth usable material.

282.03 N532

A seventeen-volume encyclopedia on the Catholic religion. It is well researched and illustrated. Contains a subject index. The subject of anthropology can be found on pp. 597-613, 747-68 of the first volume. Emphasis is given to noted Catholic anthropologists and paleoanthropologists like Wilhelm Schmidt and Pierre Teilhard de Chardin. The article on theological anthropology is informative.
290 F274h

An atlas and chronological encyclopedia of world religions. Has maps and useful chronologies in the appendix. Two of the fourteen contributors are anthropologists. They are Lawrence Krader, who writes on shamanism, and Weston Le Barre, who discusses Amerindian religions. John Mbiti's article on the traditional religions of Africa is also of interest.

290 L332L.Ea

An illustrated encyclopedia of mythology. The writer, Robert Graves, introduces this work as one that "does not discuss philosophic theory or religious experience, and treats each cult with the same impersonal courtesy". Most pertinent material will be found in the section on prehistoric mythology and the sections on the mythologies of Oceania, Black Africa and North and South America. The articles are not signed and lack accompanying bibliographies. Of interest to the layperson and the undergraduate.

291.13 C188h

A splendid treatment of the anthropomorphization of animals across cultures and through time. Describes mythic tales and processes. Has good subject index, first-rate illustrations and many excellent maps and chronologies.

291.13 D554

An authoritative, comprehensive and scholarly two-volume encyclopedia of mythology throughout the modern and ancient worlds. It is so replete with anthropological material that it invites browsing. In French.
291.13 E56

An encyclopedia on world mythology. See the sections on comparative mythology and common mythological themes. The illustrations are of poor quality.

291.13 M9994

An illustrated encyclopedia of mythology. Concentrate on the sections concerning Africa, the Americas and the Pacific. These are mainly written by anthropologists. Has many splendid pictures, a glossary and an impressive bibliography.

291.212 J62o

An unusual book which gives bits and pieces of celestial lore. Its bibliography gives a hint of anthropological material but the text, while interesting, is superficial in appropriate subject coverage.

294.503 W179h

A two-volume encyclopedia on Hinduism and related religions. Folklore, habits, customs and social mores of Hinduism are thoroughly covered by Walker. Bibliographies follow most articles.

296.03 E56

This is a sixteen-volume encyclopedia on Judaism. It is illustrated and has bibliographies at the end of each article. Contains anthropological material and also biographies of Jewish anthropologists.
296.03 J59

A twelve-volume encyclopedia concerning Judaism and peripheral topics. It is thoroughly researched and "prepared by more than four hundred scholars and specialists". Although not as comprehensive as Encyclopedia Judaica, it is, nevertheless, a repository of various articles on, or related to, anthropology. Does not have an index.

The Encyclopedia of Islam. Leiden, Neth.: E. J. Brill, 1957-

An excellent religious encyclopedia. It is a work of fine scholarship. The Encyclopedia of Islam is a work in progress and therefore not complete. The encyclopedia contains a wealth of anthropological information. Some of these data are difficult to ferret out because it lacks an index to the subjects. Therefore, the user must assiduously scan the subject arrangement. This might lead to confusion about the alphabetical arrangement of this work. Keep in mind that the capital letters place the subject alphabetically. For example, "Djazirat al-ARAB" (the land of the Arabs) will be located under "ARAB". Has cross-references and extensive bibliographies. Some pages are out of sequence but this should not deter the user from referring to this authoritative work.

300 - SOCIAL SCIENCES

300 X L693s

A systematic and critical bibliographic guide to social science literature. Anthropology reference sources are on pp. 127-37.

300 X L847
London Bibliography of the Social Sciences. London: London School of Economics and Political Science, 1931-

A twenty-seven-volume bibliography of the social sciences which has been compiled from the subject catalogs of libraries, societies and institutes. Mansfield Library lacks volumes 6 and 12-21. Has a subject index. The earlier volumes have extensively cross-referenced subjects. For example, the subject "archaeology" has 33 cross-references to other anthropological terms in one of the volumes. There is ample anthropological material extant in this set. Highly recommended for its anthropological and historical contents.

300 X M152s

A handbook which gives the myriad research works available to the student and scholar in the social sciences. Anthropology is listed in part B under the term "disciplinary studies". Also refer to the anthropology sections of the various geographical area studies. Recommended for the strength and variety of its anthropology sources.

300 X P976b

A long-standing author and subject index of book and journal citations. The subject anthropology is fairly well represented and is geared more to applied anthropology than theoretical anthropology.

300 X S678
Social Science Abstracts. Menasha, Wis.: 1929-1933.

A four-volume set of abstracts from social science periodical literature. Has an abundance of anthropological references.

300 X S6782

A subject and author index of journal articles from the social sciences. It is the successor to Social Sciences and Humanities Index and its predecessors. In its pages the user will find topics as general as social anthropology and as specific as pastoralists and herdsman.

Social Science Citation Index. Philadelphia: Institute for Scientific Information, 1965-

A computer-generated subject index to the social sciences. Refer to the user's guides in the front of each volume. Consists of a subject/keyword index which lists the surname of the author, a source index for a bibliographic description of the journal or book, and a citation index (which can be used independently from the subject and source indexes) for the works of familiar authors. More geared to the graduate student or professional than to the undergraduate. Has many anthropological citations. Cumulated annually, although earlier volumes consist of multi-year cumulations.

300 X S845r 1968

A small sourcebook of reference works in the social sciences and humanities disciplines. Anthropology sources are on pp. 38-46. Has no sources on physical anthropology.

300 X W583s 1986

An excellent and scholarly guide to literature in the social sciences. Anthropology as a subject is detailed on pp. 332-402 but anthropological information can be found throughout. Has subjects as contemporary as sociobiology. A combined subject/author index gives access to the reference citations and the text which gives a survey of each field. Highly recommended.

300 X W985g

A two-volume systematic guide and bibliography to political science. Although inclined in its subject coverage toward political science, it holds a surprising amount of anthropological material. Refer to the term "anthropology" in the table of contents. Also, look at the section called "comparative political systems" in volume two. This has area studies of Asia, Australia, Latin America, India, Japan, China, Africa and the Middle East. Although the text and references are somewhat outdated, this guide is still a helpful backup to anthropology research.

A guide intended for the American scholar or student embarked on a trip to the British Isles. Chapter one deals with the planning of the journey and chapters two and three describe the research facilities. Use the subject index for anthropological material.

300.321 M681d 1979

A specialized dictionary giving definitions of sociological and anthropological terms and also short biographies of important social scientists.

300.5 S964a

A guide for prospective authors in sociology and related fields. Essential data about each journal are described. This includes the address where the manuscript is forwarded, major content areas, topics the editors prefer, inappropriate topics, author acceptance rates and other practical information for the would-be and/or established contributor. Consult the subject, title and keyword index for the anthropology journals.

300.5 X Cl11

An index which is mainly sociologically oriented but holds occasional anthropological subjects. It indexes older works and the publisher describes it as the "Great Leap Backward" in retrospective indexing of social science literature.
300.7 S678

A three-volume, loose-leaf guide to social science curricula intended for elementary and high school teachers although some material can be used by college instructors. Has anthropology curriculum projects from the University of Georgia and the University of Chicago.

300.72 U58r

An international directory of social science organizations. It lacks a subject index so the user must search for institutions who have anthropological connections. Refer to the codification key on page ix for a better understanding of the components of the listed organizations. Mainly in English, some sections in French.

301 - SOCIOLOGY AND ANTHROPOLOGY

301 X I61

A continuing subject bibliography. Most citations are sociologically-oriented but anthropology material is in section 13 under the terms "culture", "socialization" and "social life". Also see the topics "cults", "magic and primitive religion" and "customs and traditions".

301 X I612

An important continuing bibliography on social and cultural anthropology that "constitutes... the most complete means to obtain global information about the previous year's publications" in this discipline. Archaeology, physical anthropology and linguistics are also represented. See the subject index and the classification scheme to access the sequentially numbered citations. Books, as well as journals, are indexed. This a major reference and research tool for anthropology and is worth examination. In English and French.

301 X K26c

A bibliography devoted to culture change. The author states that "this analysis and bibliography of... culture in its time-dimensional aspects is essentially a work tool". Its purpose is "to reveal... the development of theory and method... and also give access to significant case materials in regional cross-cultural contexts". It has two parts, an in-depth, historical analysis of culture change, and a chronological bibliography from 1864-1952. The abbreviations list on pp. 97-103 will aid in decoding the chronologies.

301 X M114g

An insightful survey of reference material at a major Canadian university. McCalib says that social and cultural anthropology are stressed and "materials dealing with linguistics, physical anthropology, archaeology, folklore, and mythology are excluded".

301 X M271r

A guide and survey about the teaching of anthropology. The initial eighty pages are on pedagogical factors. The remaining text is a list of books and periodicals for college libraries.

301 X Q1

Sociological Abstracts. San Diego, Calif.: Sociological Abstracts, Inc., 1953-

One of the major social science indexes. Each citation is annotated and the contents described. Anthropological material included covers social anthropology, ethnology and some linguistics and archaeology. See the table of contents under section 0500 (culture and social structure). Look especially under subsection 14 (social anthropology & ethnology). Refer to the subject index for wider anthropological coverage.

A political science handbook attempting a cross-cultural comparison using political and social variables. It is replete with charts, graphs and tabular material. Generally not of interest to anthropologists but there are a few pages on ethnolinguistic homogeneity (pp. 214-17) and some tables on ethnic and linguistic fractionalization (pp. 271-74).

An alphabetically arranged dictionary of anthropology terms and definitions. It is useful, but there are some omissions. For instance, the terms "horde" and "tribe" are defined but the term "band" is excluded.

A social science dictionary having anthropological terms interspersed throughout the text.

A small but concise dictionary which defines terms in anthropology and its sub-disciplines. Has brief biographical references to the early figures of anthropology, "those who made their major contribution by 1940".
Abstracts in Anthropology. Westport, Conn.: Greenwood Periodicals, 1970-.

A continuing and important bibliography covering all aspects of anthropology. The abstracts are to-the-point and explanatory. Has author and subject indexes. Each subject commences with theoretical, methodological and general sections and then covers specific geographical areas.

An index to journal articles and essays in anthropology and its sub-disciplines. It is compiled by the Tozzer Library, Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology, Harvard University. In paper format up to 1984 and thereafter in microfiche format. The microfiche has subject indexes, a service noticeably lacking in the paper copies. The citations are brief and unannotated. Because of its comprehensiveness, Anthropological Literature is a formidable research tool.

An in-depth and highly valuable index to international anthropology sources. Indexes periodicals held in the Museum of Mankind and the former Royal Anthropological Institute Library. Covers archaeology, ethnomusicology, physical anthropology, ethnography, linguistics, cultural anthropology and human biology. It is arranged by geographical areas and subject content. One serious drawback is the lack of a means to decipher journal title abbreviations.

A five-volume subject and author index to the major American anthropology journal, the American Anthropologist and includes both the old and new series of this title. Also indexes material from the memoirs of the American Anthropological Association. The first two volumes of this index gives citations from Current Anthropological Literature, a title issued during 1912-1913.

301.072 M167L

A library guide for undergraduate and graduate students. Has library search strategies and practical exercises to test knowledge of library usage. Cultural anthropology references are on p. 52.

301.01 X M878c

A bibliography on collective behavior. It is the author's hope that it "will be useful to those seeking a foothold on the literature dealing with specific collective behavior events". Anthropologists and students will find scattered material in the subject-title index and sequentially numbered bibliography. A subject sampling shows data on peyote cults, ghost dance religion, anthropology and social conflict, and glossolalia (tongue speaking).

301.203 E56

An illustrated encyclopedia of anthropology giving the user informative definitions and biographies. Articles are signed and cross-referenced. The editors, advisors and contributors are anthropologists or academics from related disciplines. It is "a compact, comprehensive accessible reference work devoted to the field of anthropology".

301.3 X W973

A bibliography of man and his environment. There is no common access point to the materials so browsing is recommended. There are citations in the fertility section and in the human reproduction and population genetics section that are anthropologically-oriented. They deal with culture and fertility and the population genetics of human groups. Citations are annotated.

301.32 X D782w

A well-researched, annotated bibliography on world population policy. It is sectioned into material about "policies and fertility and family size" and data on "general population policies". Anthropology material is clearly evident, although the gist of the literature concerns public administration policies. Covers from 1940-1969.

301.321 X P853s

An annotated, subject bibliography on human fertility. Use the classification system on pp. 28-33 to locate ethnological works. See section VII, especially subsection G (general cultural values and other cultural traits) and subsection D (ethnic, regional and racial classifications). Has a geographical index.

301.329 M142a

A historical population atlas in book format. Geographically and chronologically arranged. Gives a historical perspective of current world population configurations (as of 1978). Graphs and maps are prevalent, although there is a fair amount of text.

301.36098 X S117L

A bibliography on urbanization in Latin America. Composed of numbered citations arranged by subject and geographical area. Look in the sections on urban history (including social life and customs), social change, and rural-urban migration. There are anthropological citations in this work to warrant the user's attention.

A two-volume, topically arranged bibliography holding more than 6,000 citations. Its "main purpose is to guide interested readers to the best works in which they can pursue in detail any subject pertaining to women". Refer to the subject index and table of contents for best access to the contents. Note in particular the section called "Women in anthropology". Recommended for its variety and completeness.

An ongoing index about all aspects of women. Has an annual subject index. Use the subject approach to facilitate searching for anthropological citations. Article citations are abstracted.

A directory of women's organizations. Use the subject index to locate anthropologists, anthropology organizations and addresses.

A selective bibliography on homosexuality. Citations are listed numerically and by type of literature. Look in the subject index under the heading "anthropological and sociological aspects and factors" of homosexuality.

A valuable compendium of materials on social systems and family patterns. The authors state that by "going through the literature on the family we simply extracted all the propositions in which at least one of the variables was a family variable". Has a profusion of anthropological material on the family. An impressive, specialized bibliography.
301.4284 X M155d

A selective bibliography on the subject of divorce. Material is mainly limited to the United States but there are occasional references to outside areas. Has a subject index.

301.435 X T255

A nine-volume bibliography on aging. The citations are primarily excerpted from gerontology and medical journals. Each volume is devoted to a specific topic on aging. Although the bulk of the material is on aging specifics in Western and industrial societies, there are enough citations on the cross-cultural aspects of aging and aging in traditional societies to warrant looking at this reference source.

301.45 X L879i

Described as "not a bibliography. . . nor. . . a complete record of all pertinent materials. . . merely an introduction, an attempt to identify relevant subject headings. . .". Anthropologists and anthropology students should refer to section V (American Indians) on pp. 124-25.

302 - SOCIAL INTERACTION

302.03 T388m

A dictionary devoted to sociology but "selecting concepts from related fields - such as cultural anthropology. . .". Most entries have cross-references to related topics.
303 - SOCIAL SCIENCES DICTIONARIES, ENCYCLOPEDIAS

303 G697d

A dictionary of the social sciences published under the auspices of Unesco. It is "designed to describe and define approximately 1,000 basic concepts used in the social sciences". Holds many anthropological terms. Has helpful cross-references. For example, the user is referred from "cargo cult" to "nativism" to "revitalization movement".

303 I61

A massive, eighteen-volume encyclopedia of the social sciences. Each article is signed and is accompanied by a bibliography. Highly recommended as a source for anthropological knowledge.

303.603 I61

An encyclopedia of aging. Its two volumes yield articles on applied anthropology. These topics range from paleodemographics to cultural factors affecting migration.

305 - SOCIAL STRATIFICATION (SOCIAL STRUCTURE)

305 X U58L 1976

An international list of social science periodicals. Look at the subject index for anthropology periodicals. In French.

305.4 X B193w

A bibliography of bibliographies on women. See the anthropology sections on pp. 106-08 and the sociology section concerning Native American women, p. 119. Also look at the bibliographies on the Third World, including Latin America, Africa, Asia and parts of Australia and New Zealand. Has both annotated and unannotated citations.

305.4 X S859w

An impressive, critical bibliography on women's studies. Stineman's work is distinguished by her meaningful annotations. Most of the anthropological material is on pp. 17-40.

305.4094 X F893w

A bibliography on women in European history. Has substantial anthropological material. The bulk of pertinent readings fall in the antiquity section on pp. 121-213. Much of this is devoted to classical studies, but there is enough material on women in primitive societies to warrant attention.

305.40973 X T327w

This bibliography is part of the American Studies Information Guide Series. Lists book citations, journal articles, and microforms. See pp. 156-60 for anthropology citations.

305.40973 X W872

A two-volume directory of institutions having women's history works in their collections. The subject index in volume two will lead to appropriate anthropology listings. Sources are annotated.

305.40973 X W731n

A bibliography describing bibliographies of interest to feminists and women in general. Has "391 bibliographies, resource lists and literature reviews". Anthropology material is on p. 29.

Warren mentions that "this book provides an overview of the considerable literature, particularly from philosophy and the social sciences, on the nature of women". Anthropologist portraits and anthropological subjects are in the first part of the book. Anthologies and sourcebooks on anthropology are on pp. 513-17. Has a subject index.

A very impressive two-volume survey of "some 190 ethnic and/or linguistic groups" who are, for the most part, Muslims. Bibliographies follow the descriptions. A contribution from more than 130 scholars.

Cultural Institutions

A subject oriented guide to human values in technology. It is annotated. See the sections on selected anthropological and ethnic studies, pp. 220-33, industrial folklore, pp. 471-78, and the future, pp. 581-99. An example of its contents would be such a subject as the introduction of the snowmobile to Alaskan Eskimos.

Marrige and the Family

A computer-generated bibliography on marriage and the family. Key words from titles are listed. For example, a word like "brideprice" can be related to an accompanying relevant coded term to get to the citations at the back of the book.
Inventory of Marriage and the Family Literature. St. Paul: University of Minnesota, 1975—

A very useful, unannotated bibliography on marriage and the family. Refer to the subject or keyword in title (KWIT) indexes to locate anthropology items. The best headings to look under are on marriage customs and forms, and on kinship terminology.

309 - SOCIAL SITUATIONS AND CONDITIONS (GEOGRAPHICAL)

A bibliography on Scandinavia in social science literature. The section on sociology contains some solid anthropological data. For instance, there are several citations on the works of Frederik Barth, the Norwegian ethnographer. There is also a bibliography on the Lapplanders that contains numerous anthropological references. Also, look at the history and folklore sections.

A bibliography on modern China. Skinner and his associates state that "bibliographies for anthropologists cover Africa and Latin America as a matter of course, but not China...". They have rectified this circumstance through this analytical work. It is written in Western languages and covers the period from the mid-seventeenth century to the early 1970's. A quick glance at its contents brings up such subjects as lineages and clanships, kin terms and relationships, and regional and subethnic variations. This is a treasury of Chinese ethnological literature. Unfortunately, the Mansfield Library possesses only volume one of a three-volume set.

314 - GENERAL STATISTICS OF EUROPE

A British almanac of facts and descriptions. Has short statements on recent work in English anthropology and archaeology. See the subject index for such terms as "antiquarian societies", "archae-

320 - POLITICAL SCIENCE (POLITICS AND GOVERNMENT)

320 X H737i

A directory of dictionaries, handbooks and bibliographies in political science. Refer to the table of contents for anthropology sources. Do not be deterred if the subject is not readily noticeable. For instance, a title like Current Bibliography on African Affairs, one of the titles in this work, has a special section on anthropology. The user would not be aware of this unless he or she examined the citation closely.

320 X I615

A continuing subject index of abstracts from political science journals and yearbooks. Contains works on applied anthropology as related to the political context.

320 X U58b
Political Science Abstracts. New York: IFI/Plenum, 1981-.

An ongoing set of abstracts on political science. Use the author and subject indexes to locate anthropological information. These are scattered but can be found under such terms as "anthropology" and "tribalism". Much of this type of material concerns applied anthropology.

320 X U582
United States Political Science Documents. Pittsburgh: University of Pittsburgh in conjunction with the American Political Science Association, 1975-.

A continuing annotated bibliography of documents on American Political Science. Holds a respectable share of anthropology citations. The user will find such subjects as acculturation, anthropological linguistic theory and archaeology.
325 - IMMIGRATION (BLACKS)

325.26 X W926b

A reprint of the 1928 bibliography on blacks in Africa and America. It is "an effort to furnish... references to... all phases of the present day life of the Negro... and also to the anthropological and historical background of the same". Part one, which covers the Negro in Africa, has more anthropological information than part two on the Negro in America (with the exception of pp. 614-14, 637-59). An anthropological and historical work from earlier times.

325.26 X N532d

A comprehensive nine-volume catalog of Black literature and history from a special collection of one of the great libraries of the world. Its arrangement is by alphabet and consists of photographic reproductions of the subject catalog cards. Has a large number of anthropology subject headings.

327 - INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

327 X F714

A bibliography on international relations. Although there is a general scarcity of anthropological material, the user can locate scattered citations on village studies, field work results, and comparative cultural studies. These are under the geographical section. Has no subject index.

327 X F7142

Can be used as a companion to the above title, Foreign Affairs Bibliography. Refer to the geographical area studies section for anthropology book citations.
327 X Z39g

A guide to international relations. Some descriptive annotations. Anthropology resources are on p. 22.

327.0904 X M399r

Two-volume guide to social science resources. Has brief, descriptive annotations. See volume one for anthropology and area studies.

330 - ECONOMICS

330 X E19

These are abstracts to economics and management. There is a preponderance of classical and neo-classical economic material but the user can find some citations concerning ethnographic, comparative and pre-capitalist economic literature that will be of interest to anthropology students and researchers. Look at the social science section of each issue and use it in conjunction with the subject index. Formerly called Economic Abstracts.

330 X I61

A continuing subject index of economic citations. Most of the material concerns industrial and state economics and macro-economics. Refer to the economic activity sections dealing with Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Pacific. Look also at the economic prehistory and antiquities sections.

330.5 A521i

A subject index that is devoted to modern economic practice and theory. The user can extract material on peasant and pre-industrial cultures and the economic data related to them. Also look at classification 0113 which describes the role of economics.
to other disciplines. Refer to the sections on comparative economics and the economic histories of pertinent geographical areas.

331 - LABOR ECONOMICS

331.702 E56 1975

A two-volume encyclopedia on employment opportunities. Opportunities for anthropologists are listed on pp. 21-25 of volume two. Outdated.

338 - PRODUCTION

338.002573 C589p

A list of association and societies and their insignias. Has codes of ethics, constitutions and emblems. Anthropology societies are on pp. 85-87.

338.91 X G312n

A qualitative, chronological bibliography on national development. Has a subject/author index which will lead to citations on anthropological articles on national development.

338.91 X R427d

A subject bibliography about developing nations. It is somewhat dated. The section on social development (pp. 139-57) will have some anthropological use, especially the subsection on social change. An indication of its outdatedness is the fact that Japan is referred to as a "semi-developed country".
340 - LAW

340 X J17L 1969

A bibliography of law books in print. Refer to the subject lists in volume two. Study the sections on indigenous (primitive) law, law and society, and law in pertinent geographical areas. Many, if not most, of the books are out-of-print.

341 - INTERNATIONAL LAW

A bibliography and compilation of books, papers, studies and journal article citations on peace. Each citation has a synopsis of the work. See the section dealing with tension and conflict. Look at the subdivisions on tribal warfare, biological basis of human conflict, social and cultural forces affecting conflict, and cross-national differences. Has a subject index and a coding manual which helps clarify the concepts.

341.1058 Y39

A three-volume directory of international associations. Its subject index will lead to appropriate anthropological international organizations.

360 - SOCIAL PROBLEMS AND SERVICES (SOCIAL WORK)

360 X N277a

Abstracts on research in social work. The user should refer to the related fields of knowledge section, in particular to the part dealing with sociology and anthropology.
363.6 - HISTORIC PRESERVATION

A bibliographic guide to sources on historic preservation. It is a compendium of many aspects of the subject. Chapter ten discusses preservation in anthropology, historic archaeology, industrial archaeology, and salvage archaeology.

364 - CRIMINOLOGY

Criminology and Penology Abstracts. Amsterdam: Kugler Publications, 1975-.

An "international abstracting service covering the etiology of crime and juvenile delinquency, the control and treatment of offenders, criminal procedure, and the administration of justice". Refer to section 4.2 (cultural anthropology) for relevant journal abstracts. A brief examination of one of the issues uncovered a citation on Crow Indian justice on a Montana reservation.

A rather cumbersome and complicated two-volume index on criminology. See volume two, which has a confusingly labeled, subject-pared word index, to find anthropological terms on crime in primitive societies, cross-cultural aspects of crime and deviant behavior, and the sociology of crime.

370 - EDUCATION

Current Index to Journals in Education. New York: CCM Information Sciences, 1969-.

A useful index of abstracts of education journals. Look at the subject, author, and contents indexes for anthropology terms. It is accompanied by a thesaurus of ERIC descriptors to make searching easier. Has an ancillary computer database search service.
The Education Index. New York: H. W. Wilson, 1929-

A cumulative index of journal articles in education. Arranged by subject and author. Pertinent articles are on educational anthropology. There are some citations on archaeology as an aid to cross-cultural science educating.

370.014 T413

370.3 E56

A ten-volume set of article length descriptions of educational concepts. Use the subject volume to locate passages about educational anthropology, anthropology, and anthropology and education.

370.3 M753e 1982

A four-volume encyclopedia of lengthy, signed articles on educational research. Use the index volume to locate anthropological topics. Holds intelligently written and discerning articles on anthropology and education. Particularly look at the article by Charles Harrington on pp. 132-37. This work has bibliographies after some articles.

A guide to domestic educational directories. See p. 21 for anthropology and archaeology directories.

370.78 X C737

A guide listing microfiche numbers for research produced through the Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC) during 1960-69. The microfiche are in the Government Documents Department at the Mansfield Library. Refer to the subject index for anthropology fiche numbers.

371.3 - METHODS OF INSTRUCTION AND STUDY

371.3078 B427c

A guide to educational games. See anthropology/archaeology headings. Has games like "Potlach Package" (based on Kwakiutl customs).

371.333 E25

Annotated bibliography of free A/V materials. Has some anthropology material, but not an overabundance. Latest edition is at the Instructional Materials Service (IMS).

371.3332 X 138

An annotated guide to educational phonograph records. Refer to the subject section for records with an anthropological theme. These often are listed under the subject of sociology. See the section on Indians of North America. Latest edition is at IMS.

371.3333 X 138
Index to Educational Audio Tapes. Los Angeles, National Center for Educational Media, 1980.

An annotated index to audio tapes. Many anthropology tapes are listed under sociology. See the subjects "Indians of North America", and "Archaeology". Latest edition is at IMS.
371.335 - VISUAL AND AUDIOVISUAL MATERIALS AND DEVICES

371.335 X A512fi

Annotated list of films for library collections. See the titles under the subject of anthropology and under appropriate cultural groups and geographical areas.

371.335 X M928j

A catalog of 16mm film annotations from the media centers of the Mountain Plains states (Colorado, Nevada, Wyoming, and Utah). See pp. 2-59 for a listing of anthropology films and then turn to the title listings for descriptions.

371.335 X P252f

An annotated bibliography of 16mm films which are without narration but not without sound. See section two (pp. 21-41), "other places, other customs", for anthropologically-related films.

371.3352 X I38

An index to educational overhead transparencies. See the subject index to find anthropological subject transparencies. Latest edition at IMS.

371.33522 X E24

A list of films in film centers. Use the subject/title/audience level index to locate the plethora of anthropological films within these pages. A bibliography that could be quite useful to an anthropology department using films as an instructive tool.
371.33522 X I378

An annotated index to educational slides. Use the subject index for educational slides. Latest edition at IMS.

371.33522 X I38
Index to 35mm Educational Film Strips. Los Angeles: NICEM, 1980.

An annotated guide to 35mm film strips. Refer to the subject volume for access to anthropology and other areas. Latest edition at IMS.

Index to 8mm Motion Cartridges. Los Angeles: NICEM, 1980.

An annotated index to 8mm film cartridges. See the appropriate anthropology headings. Latest edition is at IMS.

Index to 16mm Educational Films. Los Angeles: NICEM, 1980.

An index of 16mm films. Has annotations. See the subject index in order to find anthropological films. Has annotations. Latest edition at IMS.

371.33523 X P252s

A listing of quality films. It is annotated. Use the topical listing to find anthropology films but be prepared to browse because not all films having anthropology as a subject are under that topic. For instance, the film River People of Chad (whose annotation indicated it has anthropological content), is listed under the subject of Africa.

371.3358 I38

An annotated index of educational videotape citations. See the subject index for anthropological material. A three-volume set.
371.355 E241
A rather outdated guide to 16mm color and black/white films. Has short annotations of film content. The subject index would be better utilized if it had cross-references to related topics. For instance, the film Hupa Indian White Deerskin Dance would have been more easily found if it had been cross-referenced to the subject "dance" or the subject "Hupa Indians". In this respect, it is suggested that the user look at all of the listings in order not to miss an appropriate film annotation.

371.355 E242 1983
Described as "the only complete guide to all films available free of cost... throughout the United States". Short annotations accompany each film listing. The films are from commercial companies, the U. S. military forces, and consuls and embassies of foreign countries. For instance, On the Track of the Bog People (found under "archaeology" in the subject index) is offered by the Royal Danish Consulate General. These films are geared toward use by educators and could be used by anthropology instructors.

371.4 - GUIDANCE AND COUNSELING

371.425 X F731o 1971
A bibliography which has, among other subjects, listings of archaeology and anthropology career resources.

371.425 X 015
An outdated, annotated bibliography of career information. Contains scattered listings for those interested in anthropology as a profession. Might be useful to guidance counselors.
371.9 - SPECIAL EDUCATION

371.975 X M385a

A selective and annotated subject bibliography of government documents from the Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC). Use the subject index to locate anthropological information.

372 - ELEMENTARY EDUCATION

372.133 X B878c

An annotated bibliography of core media for elementary school librarians and teachers. Includes filmstrips, kits, recordings, and several 16mm films. Use the subject index to search for anthropology media.

373.133 X B878c 1979

Similar to the above bibliography except that it cites secondary school media material.

374 - ADULT EDUCATION

374 D598

A guide and directory of internship information. There is a listing for the Anthropology Research Center, Inc. and its summer internship program. This is listed on pp. 88-89. This work tells who to contact, number of interns accepted, source of funds, objectives, placement rates, renumeration, and other data on the programs.
374.402573 J54c

A directory of "sixty-four major colleges and universities in the United States offering opportunities for correspondence study". Refer to the subjects "anthropology" and "archaeology" in the undergraduate and graduate credit sections and then turn to pp. 11-18 to locate the schools offering courses.

378 - HIGHER EDUCATION

378 A513

A work offering vital statistics on American colleges and universities. Look under the sections called "degree programs offered", departments and teaching staff", and "distinctive educational programs" to glean data on anthropology studies.

378 X C598c
Clapp, Jane. College Textbooks: A Classified Listing of 9,500 Textbooks in 36 Colleges, Coded to show most Frequently Used Texts and Texts Used in General Courses, and in Several Departments of Instruction. New York: Scarecrow Press, 1965.

A list of textbooks. Anthropology textbooks are on pp. 339-47. See the section on pp. 210-19 for Oriental and Near Eastern studies. An outdated book, but many of the books are authoritative and several are classics in anthropology.

378.003 I61

A ten-volume encyclopedia about higher education. International in scope. See p. 4668 in the subject index of volume ten to locate articles on anthropology and archaeology. These disciplines are described pedagogically.

378.00621 A512i

A directory describing non-profit international education foundations, academic centers, and social research organizations. Use the subject index to locate anthropological and archaeological institutions.

378.058 I61
International Handbook of Universities. Paris: International Association of Universities, 1959-.

An international handbook covering information on universities from Afghanistan to Zaire. Lacks a subject index so the user has to search for universities offering anthropology courses.

378.1 - ORGANIZATION AND ADMINISTRATION OF INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION

378.1552 G761g 1980

A critical and qualitative rating of undergraduate programs in the United States and around the world. It uses twelve criteria to determine the academic quality of a school. Refer to the suitable anthropology disciplines. The objectivity of this work has been questioned.

378.1553 A512g

A handbook covering graduate programs leading to the Doctor of Philosophy degree. Refer to the subject index for anthropology programs. Somewhat outdated.

378.1553 C328a

A survey on excellence in graduate education. Programs are rated: distinguished, strong, good and adequate plus. Faculty ratings are: extremely attractive, attractive, acceptable plus. Anthropology on pp. 3233.

A critical survey of the quality of United States and world graduate programs. It uses eleven criteria to determine the school's ranking on a scale of excellence. See the fitting anthropological disciplines. Gourman's methodology has been called into question.

A rather outdated but partially useful compendium of tabular data on U.S. graduate programs. See section D (social sciences), pp. 23-27, for anthropology comments.

A five-volume guide to graduate studies. Look in book 2 (humanities and social sciences), section 32, for anthropology and archaeology programs.

A subject guide to academic programs at British universities. Gives fundamental, but essential, information for the prospective student. Anthropology and archaeology references are on pp. 1-15. Refer also to the appropriate language and regional studies programs.

378.2 - ACADEMIC DEGREES (DOCTORAL, MASTERS THESSES)

A thirty-seven-volume index of titles of doctoral dissertations accepted in American and Canadian universities. Volumes 33-37 are author indexes. The other volumes are by subject. See volume 17 for listings on anthropology, archaeology, folklore and related subjects.

378.2 X C738 suppl.

An index that supplements and updates the above title.

378.2 X D613
Dissertation Abstracts International. Ann Arbor, Mich.: Xerox University Microfilms, 1951--.

An important annotated subject bibliography of doctoral dissertations. These have been "accepted by North American institutions and other institutions throughout the world". Anthropology dissertations (including physical anthropology) are in the volumes marked with the letter A (humanities and social sciences). Some dissertations on anthropological linguistics can also be found in the general linguistics pages.

A bibliographic index of doctoral dissertations. See the social science sections for anthropology dissertations. Look at the humanities sections for archaeology dissertations. Has twenty-two volumes covering a twenty-two year period.

378.2 X M423

A subject list of masters theses. Cumulated subject and author indexes are at the end of each volume. There is a descriptive abstract on each thesis. Look under anthropology and other related areas but be aware that other subject areas will offer usable material. As an example, a thesis entitled The Cultural Context of Incised Lines in Wooden Eskimo Masks was located under the subject of fine arts.
378.2 X M4233
Master's Theses in the Arts and Social Sciences. Cedar Falls, Ia.: Research Publications, 1976-

A subject arranged list of theses in arts and social sciences. Indexes theses from American and Canadian universities. See the table of contents for locating appropriate anthropology works. Be sure not to neglect related areas. For instance, looking under the subject of religion will bring up theses on semiotics or folklore.

378.3 - STUDENT FINANCES

378.3 A615
Annual Register of Grant Support. Los Angeles: Academic Media, 1969-

An annual directory of funding sources. See the anthropology/sociology section. Gives type of grant, purpose, eligibility requirements, application deadlines, and amounts awarded. This title supersedes Grant Data Quarterly.

378.3 S338d 1982

A directory described as "a listing of scholarships, fellowships, loans, grants, awards, and internships designed primarily or exclusively for women. . .". Use the subject index to locate those benefits dealing with anthropology and related areas.

378.3 S933
Study Abroad, Etudes a l'etranger, Estudios en el Extranjero. Paris: Unesco, 1949-

A multilingual guide to study in foreign lands. Refer to the subject index for schools offering anthropology programs. Has useful information on requirements, fees, yearly duration of study and other data. In English, French and Spanish.

378.34 G764
The Grants Register. Chicago: St. James Press, 1969-

A guide to grants. Arranged alphabetically and numerically. Has anthropology grants. See the subject index.
378.4 - HIGHER EDUCATION (GEOGRAPHICAL)

378.41 P949b

A list of professional and academic qualifications for those thinking of matriculating at British universities and schools. Use the general index for locating anthropology qualifications.

378.42 C734

A four-volume yearbook and directory of British Commonwealth universities. The general index will show schools offering anthropology courses and conferring degrees in the subject.

378.52058 J35j

An older, and perhaps outdated, directory of Japanese university research centers. Look at the section classifying universities by faculty and department in order to excerpt anthropology research programs.

378.73 C697
The College Blue Book. Yonkers-on Hudson, N.Y.: Burkel, 1923-.

A five-volume set of data on American colleges. Lists narrative, tabular, subject, and scholarship information. It is quite helpful in locating universities offering anthropology degrees.

391 - COSTUME AND PERSONAL APPEARANCE

A bibliography on costume that encompasses a pot pourri of material. Its sources include "books, periodicals, and portfolios of plates dealing with dress, jewelry, and decoration of the body, in general, and for specific occasions of all countries, times and peoples". The bibliography has extensive material relating to anthropology and ethnology. A minor irritant are the misleading cross-references. For instance, the user is referred from the term "Sioux Indians" to the term "Dakota Indians", to the term "Indians of North America - Dakota Indians". This tends to get a bit confusing. Never-the-less, the source provides insight to the cultural aspects of personal attire. The opening statement is worth reading.

391 X M752c suppl.

A supplement index to the main index. Unfortunately, the Mansfield Library lacks the main index. The one we have is illustrated, international in scope, and holds anthropological material on costumes. Entry is by subject. It is essential to use the list of books indexed (pp. 191-210) in order to decode the bibliographical citations.

398 - FOLKLORE

A thirteen-volume set of folklore abstracts from around the world. Journals are the main type of literature being abstracted. This work has scholarly contributions ranging from references to symbolic gestures in literature to critiques on Aztec hymns. Subject indexes follow each volume with the exception of volume thirteen.

398 X B721b

A slim bibliography of folklore holding quite a varied number of titles on the subject. This work has citations predominately from the British Isles but there are some selections from other areas. Separate author and subject indexes provide access to the contents. The classification system beginning each volume is especially helpful. By using these finding aids, the user can specify folk literature concerning aspects of humankind - the couvade for example - and locate citations by means of the consecutive numbers where the material is entered.

A chronological and author entry bibliography of folklore theses and dissertations coming from American universities. They cover work done from 1869-1968. Refer to the subject index (pp. 341-481) for precise key words and concepts. A very valuable bibliography for the use of folklorists and anthropologists.

398 X E13i

A compendium of terms and a bibliography of books on fairy tales and the mythological genre. Refer to the title or subject and find the notation of the book in which the tale appears. Then turn to the appropriate page to get a full bibliographic description of the source. Later supplements of this work are edited by Norma Olin Ireland and bring it up to the year 1977.

398 X H427b

A comprehensive bibliography of folklore, ethnomusicology, and anthropology. It has two parts, each having subject and author entries. Part one is on the American people north of Mexico. Part two has information on the American Indians north of Mexico. A bibliography of Murdock's culture areas are included in part two. To use this work effectively, the user must refer to the key to abbreviations in the front of the book and to the subject index in the back.

A scholarly and fascinating six-volume index of folk literature. Reference to the motif or theme in the index volume directs the user to the suitable alphabetical volume for directions to the source of the folk tale. For instance, the tale that is titled Hornbill Borrows Tomtit's Bill refers to the symbol A2241.9. The user then turns to the volume having the letter "A" and refers to the A2241.9. There it shows that the story is in a book written by Smith and Dale. Reference should then be made to the bibliography in the beginning of volume one to get the full citation, "Smith, E. W. and Dale, A. The Ila-Speaking People of Northern Rhodesia, vol.2". In addition, it is possible to bypass the subject and turn directly to the folk or mythological motif. The user can do this by referring to the general synopsis of motifs in the first volume. As an example, using the story of the hornbill, the motif would be under the heading "animal characteristics: borrowing and not returning". The Motif-Index of Folk Literature is a cumbersome work to use but information and knowledge gained from its pages far outweigh that difficulty.

A foreign language folklore encyclopedia. It is concerned mainly with Teutonic folklore. In German.

398.03 F982

A two-volume encyclopedic dictionary of folklore. It has a distinguished list of contributors including George Foster and Melville Herskovits. It is quite comprehensive (the section dance by itself runs to nineteen pages) and is anthropologically-orientated.

398.0973 H236

A valuable group of essays for the aspiring folklorist. It is well-written and meant to be read, not merely consulted. Dorson sees it as "an introduction to American folklore as it has been studied in America". Consists of four parts: interpretation of research, methods of research, topics of research, and presentation of research. An interesting book and a joy to read.

A small bibliography of American folklore. Topics range from "work and play on a border ranch" to "structural analysis of North American trickster tales". Has much anthropological data.

Enzyklopadie des Marchens: Hand Worterbuch zur Histor. u. Vergleichen-den Erzahloforschung. Berlin: De Gruyter, 1972-

An uncompleted four-volume encyclopedia of myths, legends, and narratives. Has scattered anthropological material. In German.

A book about the earth's moon. Includes elaborations of human interpretations of spots on the moon, moon worship, moon superstitions, and stories of moon habitation. Has a cross-cultural emphasis.

This work discusses languages and linguistic families around the world. It contains an index of languages and bibliographies. There are linguistic atlases in the pocket within the back cover of the book. Has enough data on anthropological linguistics to warrant attention. In French.

A continuing, quarterly issued publication holding abstracts of language and language behavior.

Bibliographie Linguistique. Utrecht, Neth.: Spectrum, 1939-47- .

An annual bibliography of linguistics which draws on a large assortment of scholarly periodicals. Has article citations ranging from general works to pieces on creolized languages. The sections on Asian, African, and American languages have anthropological relevance. Use the key to decipher the abbreviations of the journal titles in the bibliography.

401.2 - LANGUAGE-PHILOSOPHY AND HISTORY

401.2 V872c

This reference source classifies, indexes, and identifies the languages of the world. Has a wealth of anthropological information. It is compiled by linguistic anthropologists (the Voeglins') and is dedicated to major figures in anthropological linguistics (Boas, Sapir, and Bloomfield).

403 - LANGUAGES - DICTIONARIES, ENCYCLOPEDIAS AND CONCORDANCES

403 H229g 1966

A glossary of defined terms in American linguistic usage. Has value for students unfamiliar with linguistic terminology.

403 P377d

Pei, Mario Andrew and Frank Gaynor. A Dictionary of Linguistics. New York: Philosophical Library, 1954.

A dictionary of linguistical terms which are cross-referenced with other definitions. Useful for quick reference.

404 P377g

A list of terms used in linguistics. The glossary is composed of brief definitions and explanations. There are cross-references to other terms. Useful for quick reference by undergraduates.
405 - LANGUAGES - SERIAL PUBLICATIONS

405 X M689m

A guide to journals dealing with languages and literatures. Gives journal titles, addresses, editors, subscription data, and submission requirements. There are anthropology and anthropologically related journals in this guide.

405.8 Y39
The Year's Work in Modern Language Studies. London: Oxford University Press, 1931-

An annual survey of modern language studies. Gives contributions, impressions, reviews, and comments by experts in the field. The user can find terms such as "anthropology", "folklore", and "witchcraft" in the subject indexes of the volumes, but not with great regularity. Still, diligent digging will unearth critical comments relating to the anthropological aspects of language studies.

407 - LANGUAGE - STUDY AND TEACHING

407 X L287

A fourteen-volume set of abstracts on general and applied linguistics and the teaching of languages in European schools. There are occasional abstracts of journal articles on subjects like Creole languages or non-European languages. Look at the sections on studies of particular languages and on sociolinguistics.

410 - LINGUISTICS

410.3 S818c

A glossary of basic linguistical terms.
413 - POLYGLOT DICTIONARIES

413 X Z39b

An annotated dictionary of language dictionaries. The languages are alphabetically arranged. There is a language/geographic index in the back. This bibliography will help anthropologists and students locate pertinent linguistical works. Annotations are critical in content.

414 - PHONOLOGY

414.09 B615

A biographical dictionary of specialists in languages, phonology, and speech. Has a fair source of information but there is some unevenness to it. For instance, Franz Boas rightly has several pages devoted to his linguistical accomplishments, but a major figure like C. G. Voeglin is short-shrifted by receiving only cursory attention.

417 - DIALECTOLOGY AND PALAEOGRAPHY

417.2 X R366b

A language bibliography hailed as "the most complete and authoritative collection of materials on pidgin and creole languages ever published". Books and journals are listed. There is also a section of sign language. Searching is made easier by using the subject, author, and contents pages. An impressive, scholarly effort. Of value to linguistic anthropology.
418 - USAGE (APPLIED LINGUISTICS)

418 X W319d

A dictionary catalog of applied linguistics. The user can look up information by author or subject within this alphabetically arranged work. This four-volume catalog has many citations on applied anthropological linguistics.

497 - NORTH AMERICAN NATIVE LANGUAGES

497.3 H586d

A dictionary covering the Native American language as spoken around the Puget Sound and Seattle, Washington, areas. The contents are "only a small part of the total vocabulary" but the work appears well-researched. Contains an English index.

497.303 E58
English-Cheyenne Student Dictionary. Lame Deer, Mont.: Language Research Department of the Northern Cheyenne Title VII ES
e Bilingual Program, 1976.

An English-Cheyenne dictionary developed primarily for students. Appears to be a good initial source to develop a fundamental Cheyenne vocabulary.

497.5 A376d

An English-Cherokee, Cherokee-English dictionary. Alexander dedicates this book to Levi Gritts, a Cherokee Indian who "compiled and translated most of the words in this work".
497.5 B928d

A Lakota-English and an English-Lakota dictionary. It was started in 1910 by the Jesuit priest Eugene Beuchel (named "Black Eagle" by the Sioux). It is described as being the "largest and most complete collection of its kind in the world". See the Lakota grammar summary on p. 25.

497.5 G762 1971

499 - OTHER LANGUAGES

499 X K65b

An impressive and scholarly bibliography on Oceanic languages. It delineates Polynesian, Micronesian, Melanesian, and Papuan languages. Refer to the language index and the table of contents for direct access to the anthropological material.

499.211321 R175t

A dictionary of the Austronesian language known as Tagalog. Tagalog is one of the languages spoken in the Philippines. This work is a compilation of "4,000 Tagalog roots, affixes, stems, compounds, and idioms". Arranged alphabetically with the Tagalog term on the left side of the page and its English equivalent on the right hand side of the page.
500 - SCIENCES

500 X B646m

Master's theses by author, title and institution. See entry numbers 665-704 for anthropology theses.

500 X D285a 1970

A "related and annotated list of science . . . books for high school students and college undergraduates." See the table of contents for anthropology listings.

500 X D285g

Annotated guide listing descriptions of science books. See pp. 131, 137-46 for anthropology books. Note the essay on human sciences on p. 38. It was co-authored by Margaret Mead.

500 X I61

A reprint of a scientific catalog. It is published in several parts. Part P is devoted to physical anthropology but has a substantial number of citations on ethno logical and archaeological subjects. Look closely at the instruction on the use of Part P. A comprehensive work providing literature from the period when anthropology was a fairly young science. Highly recommended for its authority and its historical value.

500 X M515b

A three-volume bibliography of American natural history from 1769-1865. Although its purpose is the "increase of knowledge of American botany, geology, mineralogy, paleontology, and zoology", there is a good amount of citations on anthropology and related areas. A small portion of these citations are found under the heading "anthropology" in the subject index of the first volume. Many more will be located by randomly searching all of the volume. These appear to be citations worth researching for their anthropological contents. For instance, Benjamin Hawkin's A Concise Description of the Creek Country, with Some Remarkable Customs Practised Among the Native Inhabitants, was written in 1805, many years before anthropology was officially recognized as an academic discipline. Anthropological material is not voluminous in these volumes but the citations are there for the diligent user.

AAAS Science Books and Films. Washington: American Association for the Advancement of Science, 1965-

Essentially a review journal for the literature and films of science. Has book reviews and audio-visual reviews. See the subjects on culture anthropology and language in the table of contents. The reviews are critical.

Science Citation Index. Philadelphia: Institute for Scientific Information, 1978-

An index that has, among other subjects, citations from journals, books, reports, symposia, and conferences dealing with anthropology. Physical anthropology and archaeology are more predominantly featured than other anthropological subdivisions. This index is also on computer database. Access is similar to the other subject citation indexes which are produced by this publisher.

503 - SCIENCES, DICTIONARIES, ENCYCLOPEDIAS, CONCORDANCES

503 M147 1984

An alphabetically arranged dictionary of scientific and technical terms. The subjects are enclosed in parentheses following the term. Anthropology and archaeology are included within its scope.
506 - SCIENCE ORGANIZATIONS

A guide to international scientific societies. See the keyword index on p. 370. Anthropology is on p. 346; archaeology, p. 347; ethnology, p. 377; and linguistics, p. 415.

509 - SCIENCE, HISTORICAL AND GEOGRAPHICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL TREATMENT

509 D554

A dictionary of scientific biography. It "is designed to make available reliable information on the history of science through the medium of articles on the professional lives of scientists". Unfortunately, there are few articles on anthropologists. Notables such as Franz Boas and James George Frazer are accorded biographical status but other prominent figures in anthropology are not included.

509 S251g

A first-rate guide to the history of Science. The first few pages contain a splendid treatise by Sarton on the subject. Areas of most interest are section 18 "history of science in special cultural groups" and section 19 "history of special sciences" (particularly see the text on anthropology, ethnology, folklore, and prehistoric archaeology). A valuable work by an erudite scholar.

A standard biographical directory. Anthropologists are included.

A biographical index that "provides a means for readily locating biographical information and contemporary comment, both fragmentary and extensive". Locate the person in the list of biographies and then turn to the correlation tables to find the source of the biography. For instance, Adolph Bastien, the German physician-anthropologist, is assigned the code "pf P41" (1892). Turning to the P section in the correlation tables shows that his biography is in Popular Science Monthly and the 41 shows its year to be 1892.

A bibliography on the history of science from the collection of a major private research library. See pp. 190-93 for book citations on anthropology and ethnology.

A dictionary of the history of science. It elucidates "core features of recent Western science". Has such terms as anthropology and ethnomethodology. Access this work through its analytical table of contents, especially its human sciences section. A bibliography with brief annotations is located in the front of this dictionary. Some entries have cross-references to other subjects.

An alphabetically arranged biographical dictionary of scientists. Entries have personal data, credentials and brief descriptions of professional and academic accomplishments. This work had separate social and behavioral sciences volumes up to the 12th edition. Recent editions lack this approach and are centered on the physical sciences although physical anthropologists are still listed.
510 - MATHEMATICS (COMPUTERS)

510.78 X C738

An abstracted index of articles, reports and books on highly technical works about computers and computer technology. There are occasional article citations on anthropologically related linguistic essays but these are few and far between.

526 - MATHEMATICAL GEOGRAPHY

526.8 X L813m

530 - PHYSICS

530 X S416

An indexed bibliography of abstracted citations of journals, books, dissertations, and conference papers in physics and related disciplines. The user should refer to the subject index in each volume. It holds the key to finding such anthropological subjects as Native American astronomy, archeoastronomy, paleomagnetism, and archaeology. This reference tool is multilingual and international in scope.

530.3 E56 Suppl.

A supplement to an encyclopedic dictionary of physics. Refer to volume one, pp. 7-11, for data on physics in archaeology and see volume five, pp. 13-17, for information on archaeological dating by physical methods.
540 - CHEMISTRY AND ALLIED SCIENCES

540.3 C593e 1973

An encyclopedia of chemistry. See the section on archaeological chemistry located on pp. 103-04.

549 - MINERALOGY

Mineralogical Abstracts. London: Oxford University Press, 1923-

A bibliography of abstracted articles on mineralogy. Look in the special topics section to find the occasional abstract on anthropology and mineralogy. The user can turn up citations in titles like The Petography of Jade Stone Axes and Mineralogy of Potsherds.

550 - EARTH SCIENCES

550 X C79i

An index to state geological survey publications. Look in the subject index under the terms "archaeology", "anthropology" and "man" to locate pertinent citations.

550 X G345b
Bibliography and Index of Geology. Boulder, Colo.: American Geological Institute, 1933-

A reference bibliography and index on geology "photocomposed from citations in GeoRef, a data base produced at the American Geological Institute". It is issued annually and consists of a cumulative subject index and cumulative author bibliography. Refer to such terms as "archaeology", "paleoecology", "fossil man", "paleontology" and other anthropologically related terms. The citations are usually annotated.

551 - GEOMORPHOLOGY AND GENERAL HYDROLOGY

551.4 G345

A set of geomorphological abstracts. This subject covers the scientific treatment of the general configurations of the surface of the earth. Look in the five year subject index for applicable terms like "archaeology", "man", "culture/cultural", "radiocarbon", and "human". These terms will lead the user to anthropologically related material.

551.5 M589

A bibliography and index of abstracted articles from sources on meteorology and geoastrophysics. Look for such anthropologically related terms as "dendrochronology", "dendroclimatology", "paleoecology" and the like. This source is difficult to use because relevant citations are hard to ferret out. However, the user can come across titles like The Use of Trees as Meteorological Yearbooks which describes tree-ring dating of Aztec ruins.

551.6 - CLIMATOLOGY AND THE WEATHER

551.69 X G784b

A climatological bibliography which includes, among other things, archaeological material on prehistoric climates. It has a geographic index but lacks a subject index. This lack of a subject approach does not detract from the bibliography because the user can locate works on archaeology, paleoarchaeology and ancient climates on just about every page.

561 - PALEOBOTANY

561 X T769b

A two-volume bibliography on paleobotany and palynology. It is composed of a subject index, an author index, and annotated citations. Assiduous searching will locate anthropology data like research on prehistoric human diets. Unfortunately, this work lacks a key by which to decipher the journal title abbreviations.

570 - LIFE SCIENCES

570 X S642h

A formidable and painstakingly researched bibliography on the history of the life sciences. The best access to this work is through the table of contents, particularly the comprehensive ethnographical section on pp. 157-521. Contains a great offering of information on ethnobotany, ethnopharmacology, primitive medicine and folk medicine.

572 - HUMAN RACES

An ethnographic atlas. It was originally published in issues of the journal Ethnology but is now in book form. It is international in scope but the preponderance of the described societies are in Africa and North America. This atlas is for "the facilitation... of cross-cultural studies of a quantitative nature which require a sample of the world’s cultures". It succinctly details methodological errors which might negatively skew such studies. Societies are assigned "clusters", the qualification being that "at least 1,000 years of separation and divergent evolution are necessary" before societies can be assigned to different clusters. There are 412 clusters in this atlas. Each society, or culture, within a cluster is assigned a characteristic. The codes for these characteristics are explained on pp. 47-61. The tables on pp. 62-125 elucidate the characteristics pertaining to individual societies. Essentially, the user can refer to these quantitative devices to locate qualitative distinctions and cultural facets of the different peoples of the earth. As an example, reference to cluster 78 (Northern Nilotes) notes that the three societies under that cluster practice the custom of bride-price or bride-wealth. However, one of the societies, the Itsekiri of coastal Nigeria, have only a token, or symbolic, system of bride-price. This scholarly work must be examined closely to be used correctly.

A literature guide and bibliography to non-Russians of the Soviet Union. Refer to the anthropology and folklore sections. Also look at the language sections. Browsing is recommended.

572.98 X 045e

An ethnographic bibliography of South America arranged by tribal name and author name. It has a tribal index and map. Journals and books are cited. The key to the source abbreviations is on pp. xi-xxiv. This is a work of consequence and an important guide to literature about the indigenous peoples of South America. Central American tribes are not included.

573.3 - PREHISTORIC MAN

573.3 C799s

A looseleaf sourcebook of scientific anomalies (called "waifs" by the author). They are excerpted from sources as divergent as the American Anthropologist, Nature, National Geographic, Argosy, and English Mechanic. Covers the period of the 19th and 20th centuries. Occasionally serious, occasionally frivolous.
574 - BIOLOGY

574 X B1111 1983

A looseleaf manual on biological subjects which is designed to supplement the work BIOSIS Previews. It has a numeric code for broad subject searches on physical anthropology, ethnobotany, ethnopharmacology, and other subjects applicable to anthropology.

574 X B515

A continuing and comprehensive index of abstracted journal and book citations. It is a long-standing mainstay of research scientists and graduate students. In addition to the abstracts, it has author, generic, biosystematic, concept, and subject (keyword) indexes. Most of the anthropological data in its pages concerns biological or physical anthropology. Also available on computer database.

574 X B6161
Bioresearch Index. Philadelphia: Biosciences Information Service, 1967-.

An index on bioresearch (research in biology). Access is easiest through the subject and keyword index. Focuses on reports, reviews, conference papers, and symposia proceedings. Physical anthropology is the main anthropological subdiscipline represented.

574.012 S993

An authoritative and scholarly work which classifies animals and plants. It has two volumes. See the section of primates (including hominidae) on pp. 1030-34 of volume two.

A three-volume set of biological data. There is a subject index in each volume. The data are quantitative. Most of the anthropological material concerns physical and biological anthropology. Look for terms like "man" or "homo sapiens" to bring up citations like The Effects of Altitude on Arterial Blood Gases.

A bibliography on African ecology. It is arranged by geographical area and it lists pertinent subjects within the area. Concentrate on the topical bibliographies in paleoecology, anthropology, history, and geography.

---

A dictionary of genetic terms. It is illustrated and contains maps and diagrams. Many definitions equate to physical anthropology.

580 X U58b

A fifteen-volume catalog of reproductions of subject catalog cards from the National Agricultural Library. It deals with botany. Look for the subject "ethnobotany" in volume five and "medical botany" in volume eight. These headings will bring forth book citations with anthropological connections. Refer also to specific geographical areas.

581 - BOTANY

581 X K43c

An eight-volume catalog of reproductions of catalog cards on botany. It has author and subject catalogs. See in particular the literature on ethnobotany in volume three, pp. 645-52.

581.6103 C755d

An encyclopedic dictionary of useful plants. Read the introduction, "American Indians and their use of Native Plants". This is followed by a bibliography on Native American plant use for food and medicine.

590 - ZOOLOGICAL SCIENCES

The Zoological Record... Being the Records of Zoological Literature. London: The Zoological Society of London, 1864-

An ongoing bibliography of zoology spanning two centuries. Anthropological citations are more easily located in the subject indexes of the more recent volumes. Particularly look at section 19, "mammalia", and the subheading called "animals and man". This will provide subjects like archaeological sites, human primitive cultures, domestication (of animals), animals in art, and mythology-folklore-literature (where animals are depicted). Once the subject heading is gained, the user can then refer to the indicated bibliographic citation.

591 - ZOOLOGY

591 G895t.E

A thirteen volume illustrated encyclopedia of animal life. See volume 10, chapters 12-22, on prosimians, primates, monkeys and apes. See volume 11, chapters 1-2, for data on chimpanzees and humans.

591.5 G895

An illustrated encyclopedia of ethology, the study of animal behavior. Refer to chapters 22, learning and play; 23, non-verbal thinking; 31, evolution of social behavior in animals; 35, organization and function of primate groups; 40, the evolution of behavior; and 43, phylogenetic adaptations in human behavior. This work contains a dictionary of ethological terms, a subject index, and a bibliography.

598 - AVES (BIRDS)

598.916 X L736w

A bibliography on the bald eagle. Refer to the permuted list of keywords for terms such as anthropology, folklore, archaeology, and Indian culture. Then turn to the number in the master list of citations, some of which have anthropological significance, but many of them coming from popular journal literature.
600 - TECHNOLOGY (APPLIED SCIENCES)

Applied Science and Technology Index. New York: H. W. Wilson, 1918-.

This is a "cumulative index to English language periodicals" in the applied sciences. Arranged by subject and author. Look for the subject term "anthropology" and its many cross-references to related terms. Most pertinent literature is on archaeology and its subjects. These can bring up journal citations on ancient pottery, archaeological excavations, stone implements, and radioactive dating.

610 - MEDICAL SCIENCES, MEDICINE

Cumulative Index to Nursing and Allied Health Literature, Including a List of Subject Headings. Glendale, Calif.: Seventh Day Adventist Hospital Association, 1970-.

A subject and author index to nursing and allied health. It holds some anthropological data but they are hard to locate. The user would have to refer to the subject list for browsing.

612 - HUMAN PHYSIOLOGY

612 R187

A beautifully illustrated and informative encyclopedia of the human body and mind. See the section on the evolution of man.

612.6007 X S489s

A bibliography on sex and sex education. It is related to human sexuality. Some of the citations are annotated. Emphasis on North America and Europe. Anthropologically related data can be found in chapter six under the subjects "sex attitudes", "customs", and "behavior". A mixture of scholarly and popular material.
613 - INDUSTRIAL AND OCCUPATIONAL HYGIENE

613.6203 I61o

An encyclopedia dealing with health and safety in the workplace. Its data "are concerned with body build, composition and construction" and the relationship of the body to machines and industrial clothing. It shows work hazards and details preventive safety measures. Has some applied anthropological material dealing with anthropometry (the study of human measurements) and its relationship to what people do at work.

613.7 - PHYSICAL FITNESS

613.705 X P578

A physical education and sports index. Holds some citations on the sociology of sport and anthropometry. Similar to Physical Education Index.

613.705 X P5782

An index which covers physical education. It is arranged by subject and has a smattering of material on anthropology and sport sociology. Similar to Physical Education/Sports Index.

614.7 - ENVIRONMENTAL PROBLEMS AND SERVICES

614.7 E615

A data book on environmental impact. "This book will serve as a data reference... in the preparation of environmental impact assessments and statements". Anthropologists and students should refer to chapter thirteen (cultural impacts) and especially pp. 745-54 which contain criteria for historic site determination and a list of state historic preservation officers. This work may be a bit outdated but it provides fundamental information for archaeologists.

615.3 - PHARMACOLOGY AND THERAPEUTICS

615.321 M694a

An ethnobotany reference dictionary. It has "been designed as a guide to the Native American medicinal uses of plants...". Divided into tables on genera, indications, families, and cultures. A quick source finder for ethnobotanical terms and folk medicine descriptions.

616.85 - DISEASES OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM AND PSYCHIATRIC DISORDERS

616.855 X A512d

A continuing series of abstracts which give "brief, noncritical summaries of literature published in all major languages and pertinent to deafness, speech and hearing". Material is listed through the subject indexes. See the sections on cross-cultural comparisons and the references to animal communication. Of value to physical and linguistical anthropologists.

616.861 - ALCOHOLISM

616.861 X B437a

An international bibliography on the cultural uses of alcohol. Contains citations from The International Bibliography of Studies on Alcohol. The authors, both anthropologists, state that their purpose in compiling this work is to provide "easier and more comprehensive access to the large, diverse, and widely scattered literature that deals with alcoholic beverages in relation to human behavior among various populations throughout the world". Arranged by author and subject. An important bibliography.

A scholarly and comprehensive international bibliography of studies on alcohol. Composed of bibliographic citations from substantial, well-researched articles on the subject. It complements a follow-up study, Alcohol Use and World Cultures. Covers the time period between 1901-1950. Refer to the subjects dealing with culture and alcoholism, drinking customs and patterns, and the etiology of alcoholism. The user can gain more specific data by referring to such headings as "Kaffir beer" or accessing the work through ethnic and religious subject headings.

616.89 - PSYCHIATRIC DISORDERS

An authoritative encyclopedia of psychiatry, psychology, psychoanalysis and neurology. Look for anthropological material under the subjects "anthropology and psychiatry," "culture and thought," "homosexuality: cultural aspects," "cultural relativism psychiatry, socialization: cross-cultural research," and "sociology and psychiatry." More specific entries are under such terms as culture and personality, shaminism, and animal behavior. Bibliographies follow the encyclopedic articles.

618.9 - PEDIATRICS (CHILDREN)

An impressive bibliography of child psychiatry which holds a wealth of anthropological material. Refer to the table of contents for the headings "cultural aspects of child psychiatry" and "socio-cultural issues in child psychiatry." Also look at the subject and author indexes and the lists of additional readings. There is also a list of films. Some of them deal with animal studies and cultural topics in the subject.
623.4 - ORDNANCE (WEAPONS)

623.409 D536w

An illustrated encyclopedia of weapons through the ages. The arms used by primitive and/or non-Western cultures are shown in chapters one ("arming the hand"), two ("hand-thrown missiles"), and three ("hand-held missiles - throwers"). See also the general subject index and the regional and historical indexes on pp. 280-301.

630 - AGRICULTURE

630.5 X B615

A subject and author index holding agricultural and biological journal article citations. Look under the subjects "man", "man, prehistoric", "migrations of man", "anthropo-geography", "culture", "acculturation", "archaeology", and other related headings.

630.5 X U58b

A bibliography on agricultural subjects. Has anthropological, archaeological, and folk material. Also contains a geographic index.

630.973 X S339b

A bibliography of the history of American agriculture. It is mainly on agricultural aspects related to the European colonists but reference to it subject index under the term "Indians" will bring up some anthropologically related material. Journals are not indexed.
633.2 - FORAGE CROPS

633.2 X V183r

A guide and bibliography to rangelands and foraging or browsing areas. Reference to particular geographic areas will yield anthropological data. For instance, looking under the term "Africa" will ring up such citations as The Sociological Aspects of Pastoral Livestock Production and Cultural Conflicts with the Cattle Business in Zambia.

641 - FOOD AND DRINK

641.105 N9763

An index of journal articles and review abstracts on nutrition. Has subjects dealing with nutritional information on various ethnic groups.

649 - CHILD REARING

649.1 X C536

An index of abstracted journal articles on child development. Look in the social psychological, cultural, and personality studies sections. Also refer to the general subject index.

677 - TEXTILES

677.003 A512a 1980

An encyclopedia covering many phases of textiles and the manufacture of textiles. Has a small amount of relevant material in the sections describing textiles in prehistoric times and archaeological discoveries of textiles. Also refer to the chronological index.
700 - THE ARTS

700 X A784
Art Index: A Cumulated Author and Subject Index to a Selected List of the Fine Arts Periodicals and Museum Bulletins. New York: H. W. Wilson, 1929- .

An art index arranged by subject and author. The anthropological information it holds centers mostly on archaeology and ethnic art.

700 X A7846

A source containing art and technical abstracts from "articles, reports, news items, and books". Has material that covers the spectrum from methods of microscopy in southwestern (American) archaeology to studies in the degradation of a Roman temple. Consists of two volumes per year. Both the subject index and the table of contents give admirable access to the citations.

700 X R111

A bibliography containing "current publications in the history of art" and covering "worldwide literature on Western art in all media from late antiquity (4th century) to the present". Middle Eastern art is included. Search in the subject index for such terms as "archaeology", "pre-Columbian art", "ethnology", and "primitive art".

700 X V222i 1966

A subject listing of illustrations and the works in which they can be found. The user can look up a subject, say cave drawings, and find out in which source it is located.

A quarterly issued bulletin to international printed art catalogs. See the index of non-Western art. This is located within the cumulated subject index at the end of each volume.

700.973 X A792

A four-volume bibliography of arts in America. Look in particular at volume one, citations A1-A1392 on "Eskimo and American Indian art". Refer also to the subject index in volume four.

703 - ARTS - DICTIONARIES, ENCYCLOPEDIAS, CONCORDANCES

703 E564

A scholarly, fifteen-volume encyclopedia of world art. Each article contributed by an expert in the fields stands as an authoritative presentation. The section of Bantu art alone encompasses 40 pages. The subject index will lead to anthropological material, but the simple act of browsing will also elicit such references. For example, an entire section in volume eight is devoted to shamanistic art. There is also a sixteenth volume, a supplement to the regular set. Has many striking illustrations. Highly recommended.

703 P897

An alphabetically and subject-arranged encyclopedia of art. See the sections labeled "art of antiquity" (pp. 101-45), and "art outside Europe" (pp. 516-65). Has many black and white and colored pictures.
703 R941e

An art encyclopedia. Has occasional anthropological information. For instance, in the discussion of primitive art, the comments of Tylor, Boas, and Levy-Bruhl are mentioned. Subjects are cross-referenced. As an example, the user can be referred from the term "Yurok" to the subject "California Indian art". No illustrations.

703 V834

An illustrated dictionary of art from the prehistoric era to the present. See the sections on paleolithic, pre-Columbian, and North American Indian art.

704 - ARTS - SPECIAL TOPICS IN FINE AND DECORATIVE ARTS

704.97 X S741p

A directory of commercial and non-commercial sources of pictures. See the subject index to locate the sources for anthropological art.

704.973 X A512a

A compendium and index which lists world art pieces and where they are located. Refer to the sections on primitive and prehistoric art. Use the table of contents for general searches and the subject index for more specific access.

705 - ARTS - SERIAL PUBLICATIONS

705 A512

A directory of art described as a "standard in the field of art and an indispensible reference to art museums, libraries, organizations, schools, and corporate art holdings". Geographically arranged. See the subject index to find institutions holding anthropological art in their collection.

709 - ART HISTORY

709 X A767g

A subject-arranged sourcebook on art history. Refer to the sections on ancient, prehistoric and native art.

709.01 H987a.Eh

A scholarly, illustrated encyclopedia of prehistoric and ancient art. Covers primitive art and art of the agrarian empires, the metal civilizations and the development of art in Asia. Contains a subject index.

711 - ART PLANNING

CPL Bibliographies. Chicago: Council of Planning Librarians, 1979-.

A source for contributed bibliographies on community and regional planning and the problems inherent in industrial societies. Has such appropriate bibliographies as lists of books on historic preservation in the Northwest United States and the social problems of urbanization in developing countries. Has cumulative indexes. A successor to the Council of Planning Librarians Exchange Bibliography.

711 X C855e

The forerunner to CPL Bibliographies. Consists of individually and jointly authored bibliographies by librarians, urban planners, sociologists, demographers, and others in the planning fields. Contains more anthropologically-oriented bibliographies than its successor, CPL Bibliographies.
720 - ARCHITECTURE

720.9 H223a 1953

A handbook on the history of architecture. See chapters one and two which are on primitive architecture and describe five great building cultures. Also look at interlude A, on pre-Columbian architecture. This is illustrated and has a subject index.

730 - PLASTIC ARTS (SCULPTURE)

730 X C589s

A two-volume index of sculpture around the world. See the sections on the Americas, the Orient, Africa, and the Pacific.

730.973 T974

An illustrated book on 200 years of American sculpture. See the part describing aboriginal art.

770 - PHOTOGRAPHY

770.3 F652 1965

A good illustrated encyclopedia of photography. See pp. 53-57 on archaeological photography.
780 - MUSIC

780 H876a

780 X D835m 1974

780 X J74d 1971

A list of doctoral dissertations in music. Many of them concern folk music or ethnomusicology. Refer to the subject index.

780 X M321i

A two-volume handbook of music. See volume two; it has a preponderance of anthropological citations, even though they are limited to the Western Hemisphere. Most of the material is on Latin American music and has data on folk music, narrative music and historical studies on music. Has subject and geographical indexes.

780 X M987

A music index listing citations by author and subject. Use the terms "anthropology," "archaeology," and "ethnomusicology" to locate appropriate citations. A basic source for music research.

A music reference source which is similar to The Music Index except that many citations have short abstracts. Look in the section on ethnomusicology and non-Western art music. Also, make reference to the part on music and related disciplines like sociology.

A subject list of music books. See section XII, "national music and folk music", and section XIII, "musicology - ethnomusicology".

A learned work on musicology in its ethnological sense. Kunst states that "the contents speak for themselves". This is true in that there is a plethora of material on the subject. The introduction should be read for its own value. Highly recommended for its comprehensive coverage.

A dictionary of music. Has short definitions and relatively long articles. Illustrated. Thorough browsing will locate anthropological works. Look at the sections dealing with music history and see the articles on the cultural influences of music for certain countries and continents.

A scholarly and authoritative twenty-volume encyclopedia of music and musicians. Gives an exhaustive treatment of the subject. Much of the material will not be appropriate for anthropological study but this work does hold occasional articles on ethnomusicology. For example, the article on "Ethiopia" addresses Ethiopian religious music and dance, secular music, music and society, and Ethiopian musical instruments. It is illustrated but has no index. Refer also to the 1954 edition.

A guide to periodical articles on music. Contains occasional citations on ethnomusicology. Describes items as specific as the construction of Asian bamboo flutes and the folklore associated with the instrument.

780.7 X H313m

A subject bibliography on music education. See sections 37, "ethnomusicology", and 38, "folk music and folklore". The citations have short, descriptive comments.

780.8 X G364i

A bibliographic index to musical festschriften (collections of learned papers). Note the material on ethnomusicology, pp. 115-25. The key to the works in which the festschriften are located can be found in the list of festschriften, pp. 3-32.

780.9 L332

An illustrated encyclopedia about music around the world. Most of the anthropological treatment of music can be found in section one, pp. 15-40, "music of the oral traditions". and in section six, pp. 365-533, "music of the modern world", a critique of music in particular geographical areas.

780.9 S121o 1955

A dated, but still relevant, bibliography on music in Africa. Arranged by country and region. Lists bibliographies and catalogs on the subject. Has a wealth of ethnomusicological data.

A large, illustrated encyclopedia on Canadian music. See the sections on Inuit (Eskimo) music and ethnomusicology.

An interesting bibliography of American music. Has well-documented citations and long, meaningful annotations. The material is sequentially numbered and subject arranged. See section E, "music of the American Indians", section F, "folk music", and section G, "Black music".

American dissertations in music. Refer to section IV, pp. 111-22, "ethnomusicology".

A bibliography of resources on Black music. Browse to locate ethnographic material. Lacks a subject index.
781.773 R628b

A history of American Black music. See part one which covers the antecedents of domestic Black music and its early years. Has an extensive bibliography and subject index.

781.91 - MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

781.9103 D536m

An illustrated encyclopedia of musical instruments around the globe. Most of the illustrations are excellently crafted drawings. Has a geographical index which lists the instruments by country and area, silhouettes their physical shapes, and refers to the text. Thus, the user can easily locate musical instruments from prehistoric times to those used by contemporary traditional societies. Runs through the spectrum of instruments from prehistoric bone flutes to Moog synthesizers. Has a subject index. A very impressive encyclopedia.

781.9103 M322m

An illustrated dictionary of musical instruments. Also serves as an ethnomusicological guide. Describes ancient and traditional instruments.

781.9103 N532

A learned three-volume encyclopedic dictionary which details musical instruments worldwide. Gives their history, construction and method of playing. Bibliographies follow each description. This work is a treasury of anthropological and ethnomusicological material. It covers instruments from the "A" (a stopped flute ensemble of the Red Dunes bushmen) to the "Zurna" (an Arabian folk oboe).
790 - PERFORMING ARTS

790.2 X P4378

A bibliography holding 12,000 subjects covering over a hundred years of performing arts publishing in America. See the subject area directory. Look in particular for the sections on national music and arts in general. The next step is to turn to the subject citations. They cover items like "dance in Oceania", "African folk music", "Bahaman folklore", and other appropriate topics.

791.4 - MOTION PICTURES

791.4305 X M122n

A subject-arranged film index which also deals with film making and film history. Locate the material on film and anthropology on pp. 428-29. Users might also be interested in looking at the biography of Robert Flaherty, the producer of early ethnographically oriented films like Men of Aran and Nanook of the North.

791.438 R345s

A critically annotated, illustrated bibliography of short films. Look under the subject of anthropology for relevant films.

793.3 - DANCE

793.3 X G946

A subject guide to dance journal article citations. Look under the term "ethnological dance" for appropriate information.
800 - LITERATURE

800 X P318L

An "evaluative, annotated bibliography of important reference books and periodicals on American and English literature, of the most useful sources for research in other national literatures, and of more than 300 reference books in literature related areas". See the section called "folklore, mythology, legend". This can be found on pp. 266-68.

808 - RHETORIC AND LITERATURE COLLECTIONS

808.0663 M959g

A practical guide to writing and getting published in the social and behavioral sciences. Gives data on outlines, drafts, revisions, manuscript preparation, contacts, sources, and many other vital data for the prospective author.

808.52 X M956b

Cook, Dorothy and Isabel S. Munro, comps. Short Story Index. New York: H. W. Wilson, 1953-.

An index to short stories of fiction. It is arranged by author, title and subject. See such terms as "man, primitive", "archaeology", "archaeologists", and "cults". Culture groups like the Inuit and Salish are listed. Once the short story title is found under the subject, the user then can turn to the title of the collection which has the story.

A bibliography of historical fiction. Each book citation has a brief two or three line annotation. Has some historical and fictional works on anthropology and the effects of acculturation.

An annotated index to novel length fiction. Look under such terms as "anthropology", "archaeologists", and "archaeology". Find societies like the Masai, Matabele, or Dakota Indians, to name a few.

Essay and General Literature Index: An Index to Essays and Articles in Collections of Essays and Miscellaneous Works. New York: H. W. Wilson, 1900-.

A valuable, well-documented source to essays and essay collections. Use the subject index. Has essay citations on anthropology, anthropological linguistics, field work methodology, and economic, philosophical, physical, structural, and theological anthropology. Refer to the section giving the list of books indexed. This has the essay source.

Abstracts of English Studies. Calgary, Alba.: University of Calgary Press, 1958-.

A continuing and topically-arranged set of abstracts of English literature studies. These are selected from journal articles. Anthropological information is rather difficult to find but occasional items appear in the world literature sections. Browsing through these sections will produce abstracts on topics like Melanesian cargo cults and discussions on the notion that primitive politics and primitive religion are inseparable. Folklore is listed as one of the categories, but the anthropological material is scanty. Some of the linguistical articles hint of peripheral interest for anthropologists.
820.6 E58y
English Association. Year's Work in English Studies. London: Oxford University Press, 1921-

An annual publication of critical comments of English literature studies. See index II, "authors and subjects treated", to gain access to critiques dealing with anthropological literature. This has broad comments on anthropology and literature and also delves into narrower areas like folk elements in Caribbean literature.

900 - GENERAL GEOGRAPHY AND HISTORY AND ALLIED SUBJECTS

A lengthy, annotated bibliography of history and related disciplines. Has many citations on anthropology, archaeology, ethnology, and cultural history. Contains a subject and author index.

900 X C153c

A twenty-eight-volume catalog of books held by the Bancroft Library, University of California, Berkeley, a major facility specializing in historical research. Access the material by subject. This work has catalog card reproductions of anthropology books.

900 X I61
International Bibliography of Historical Sciences. Paris: International Committee of Historical Sciences, 1965-

A continuing bibliography devoted to an international coverage of history. Arranged by subject and author. See section C, "prehistory and prehistorical"; section R, "Asia"; section S, "Africa"; section T, "America"; and section U, "Oceania". Much of the material in these sections concerns archaeology. There is also a list of archaeology bibliographies on p. xxi. Look for the sub-section on linguistics on pp. 5-6. This work lacks a key to decipher the title abbreviations of the many books and journals cited.
900 X K95d
Kuehl, Warren F. Dissertations in History: An Index to Dissertations Completed in History Departments of United States and Canadian Universities. Lexington, Ky.: University of Kentucky, 1965-

An index to the Ph.D. dissertations from American and Canadian universities. Using the subject index will locate anthropology and anthropology-related dissertation titles.

900 X L381h 1976

A bibliography of non-fiction historical works. Some of the books have anthropological themes. Lacks a subject index.

900.1 C855h

A bibliography of historical bibliographies whose "purpose...is to bring together...the important retrospective and current bibliographies of history...". Some of the briefly annotated works are on ethnology and archaeology.

900.1 G946

An international guide to sources in history. It is an older book but does have some pertinent material. See the sections "anthropology", pp. 13-16, "archaeology and epigraphy" (ancient inscriptions), pp. 42-43, and the list of anthropology periodicals on p. 44. Refer to the contents part of each section within the text as they contain ethnographies of various geographical areas. Intelligently and critically annotated.

901.8 - ORAL HISTORY

901.8 X W313b 1975

A slim volume listing annotated citations on oral history. It is arranged by date and citation number. Refer to the subjects
"anthropology", "Indian" (oral history), "social sciences", and "sociology".

901.8025 X M487o

A list of oral history collections. Most relevant data can be found through the names of tribes. For example, looking up the subject "Arapaho Indians" gives the information that oral histories for this group are located in the collection of the State Historical Society of Colorado.

901.9 - HISTORY BIBLIOGRAPHY

901.9 X A512s

A history bibliography on Asia, Africa, Eastern Europe, and Latin America. Look at the table of contents preceding each geographical area. It holds subjects leading to relevant anthropological titles. Lacks a subject index. Browsing is suggested.

901.908 D554

A scholarly, enlightening, and detailed five-volume collection of essays on human thought concepts and ideas throughout history. Contains guiding principles from some of the greatest minds in history. Volume II seems to be the most appropriate source of information about anthropology. Refer to its section on the history of ideas about human nature in anthropology, psychology, religion and philosophy. Do not neglect the other volumes as anthropological material is spread throughout the text.

902 - CHRONOLOGIES OF HISTORY

902 L276e 1975

An illustrated encyclopedia of world history. It covers all places and times. See the table of contents for anthropological topics. Chronologically arranged.

A chronology of world history. Gives brief surveys of the living conditions of humans throughout the ages. Covers history and politics, literature and theater, religion, philosophy and learning, visual arts, science, music, technology, growth, and daily activities. Contains interesting fragments and useful information. For instance, under the daily life section for the time period 3,000-2,501 B.C. are the first reports of the domesticated dog in Egypt, Summrian metal coins beginning to replace barley as legal tender, and the existence of lake dwellings in middle Europe.

A scholarly, but outdated, twelve-volume illustrated encyclopedia of history. Much of its contents may have been reinterpreted by revisionist historians. It is comprehensive and remains a source for ready reference to applicable subjects. Cross-references in the text pinpoint anthropology articles. Lacks volumes 3 and 11.

A chronology of history from prehistoric times to 1950 A.D. Has little of anthropological interest but it might be useful in affixing dates to historical events having some relationship to the subject.
905 - HISTORY - SERIAL PUBLICATIONS

905 I38

An index to book reviews in historical periodicals. As there is no subject index, the user must browse through the title index in hope of finding an anthropological citation. Refer from the title index to the author index in order to get the full book review citation. Contains a sizable amount of reviews in anthropology for the years 1972-77.

905 X B671h

A geographical directory of international history journals. The journal titles are listed under each country. Has brief descriptions of each periodical. Social science and anthropology journals can be found.

909 - GENERAL WORLD HISTORY

909 L332.Ea

An illustrated encyclopedia of ancient and medieval history. The eminent historian, Arnold Toynbee, wrote the forward to this work. See the sections called "Man before History" (pp. 13-17) and "Pre-Columbian America" (pp. 401-03).

909 X H673

The predecessor to Historical Abstracts A and B. Refer to those titles.
909 X H6731

Santa Barbara, Calif.: ABC-CLIO Press, 1971-

A list of abstracts from history sources covering the time period from 1450-1914. See description for Historical Abstracts, Part B. Twentieth Century Abstracts, 1914-Present.

A continuing series of journal, book, and dissertation abstracts on history. United States and Canadian histories are excluded. They are found in America: History and Life and are published by the same publisher. Using the subject indexes and the tables of contents are good ways to access anthropological material and its many related areas. Contains up-to-date and pertinent material. For example, in a recent issue an article discussing the Mead - Freeman controversy was found in the subject index under the heading "Samoa, anthropology".

909.02 M382g

An illustrated, chronological account of world history. Some anthropologically related data are entered, but only in capsule form.

910 - GENERAL GEOGRAPHY, TRAVEL

910 G345.E 1965

An illustrated, international encyclopedia of geography. Has some peripheral anthropological data. Concentrate on the appropriate geographical areas and refer to those sections of the text bearing some relationship to anthropology. For example, the descriptive passages on West and Equatorial Africa have useful data on spatial analyses and ecology. Has a subject index.
Current Geographical Publications. Milwaukee, Wisc.: University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, 1978-

A bibliography of geographical publications from selected "books, periodicals, articles, pamphlets, government documents, maps and atlases". Make reference to the table of contents and look for the material under human geography. Under this topic, the user will find literature on archaeology, historic preservation, burial customs, ethnicity, and other subjects.

These are abstracts from geography and geography-related sources. See the section called "biogeography" for the topics palynology and historical (including faunal and human) to find abstracted articles on such topics as Neolithic forest clearings. Refer also to the sub-heading labeled "historical". This will bring forth determinants like aridity and rainfall and other ecological patterns affecting ancient cultural settlements. This work is similar in arrangement to abstracts C and D of this title.

Has abstracts from geographical sources. Look under the term "historical" to find material on industrial archaeology and the history of agriculture. Similar in arrangement to the B and D series of this title.

Contains abstracts from geographical sources. See the topics called "social" and "cultural" to find the occasional anthropological or archaeological references extant in this work. Look at the subject "Man and his environment". Similar in arrangement to the B and C series of this title.

A subject index covering Geo Abstracts for 1967-1971. Look for anthropology terms and then turn to the appropriate abstract volume for the citation.

A two-volume annotated bibliography of Black folklore in much of the Western Hemisphere. Also has ethnological and linguistical material. There is a cross-referenced subject index and a locale (regional) index.

A semi-popular but informative international encyclopedia of Black persons. Although there is some ethnological material in the chapters on Black America, most of the usable data are in the text dealing with Black Africa. Also contains an enlightening chapter on the Blacks of Asia. This work is illustrated.

A checklist of materials in the Basque collection of the University of Idaho Library. Has materials on Basque language, literature and folklore.

An annotated bibliography on the equatorial regions of the world. It stresses a multiple approach to its contents. See the sections listed as "social" and "economic" under each geographical area depicted. There is enough anthropological material to justify.
browsing through this interesting book. Annotated in French and English.

910.09154 P344a

An international directory of scientific institutions involved in arid lands research. See the organizations that include within their scope such terms as "anthropological", "human", "cultural", and "sociological". Gives basic information like organization name, address, and personnel.

910.3 D554

A dictionary of human geography. Has some peripheral subjects related to anthropology.

910.3 W927 1976

A five-volume encyclopedia on the nations of the world. Voluminous information is given for each geographical area. For material of anthropological importance, look under the sections titled "migration", "ethnic groups", "languages", and "history". Concentrate on the volumes dealing with Asia, Africa, Oceania, and the Americas. Tables and maps are interspersed throughout the text.

910.5 X G342a
Geo Abstracts. A: Landforms and the Quaternary. Norwich, Eng.: Geo Abstracts, 1972-

Supersedes the original series referred to earlier. Composed of journal article abstracts. Refer to the sections "quaternary - general and dating" and "quaternary - tropics and subtropics". These will produce abstracts on topics like pollen studies, tree-ring chronology, and hominid fossils. Has regional and author indexes.
Geo Abstracts. B: Climatology and Hydrology. Norwich, Eng.: Geo Abstracts, 1972-

Supersedes the original series referred to earlier. See the section on climatic fluctuations. This holds literature of possible interest for the archaeologist or paleoanthropologist. Has regional, author indexes.

Supersedes the original series referred to earlier. Note the sections called "cultural" and "historical". They contain anthropological and archaeological data.

910.5 X G342g

Supersedes the original series referred to earlier. Archaeologists will be interested in the material found in the section called "interpretation and applications - thematic planning". It has data applicable to remote sensing and earth imagery applications to archaeological and cultural resource studies.

910.5 X G342i
Geo Abstracts Annual Index. Norwich, Eng.: Geo Abstracts, 1972-

Supersedes the original series referred to earlier. An annual and continuing subject and author index to all individual subject abstract titles of Geo Abstracts. A-G. Provides a quick way to find anthropological and archaeological terms.

910.5 X S672g 1972

A subject listing of articles in three journals: Annals of the Association of American Geographers, Economic Geography, and Geographical Review. Look at the section called "cultural classification". Similar to A Tri-Index to Geography Periodicals.

Provides geographical citations from three journals: Canadian Geographer, Professional Geographer, and Soviet Geography. See the subjects "cultural classification", "settlement", and "historical". Similar to Snipe's A Guide to Geographical Periodicals.

913 - ANCIENT WORLD

A small dictionary of archaeological terms and their definitions. Covers both Old World and New World archaeology.

An illustrated encyclopedia of archaeology. The first part, "Archaeology at Work", gives explanatory and methodological information. The second part, "The Recovery of the Past", is a descriptive account of the history of Old and New World archaeology. A comprehensive, but not authoritative, work. Has biographical and subject indexes.

An illustrated atlas of ancient archaeology covering both the Old World and the New World. Arrangement is by geographical area. The contents have site descriptions, site configurations, and layouts from prehistoric, protohistoric and historic excavations. Has an excellent contents and subject index. The chronological chart and the glossary are very helpful. An impressive effort by the author of several other books on archaeology.
913.7 E13r

An anthropological bibliography of the Eastern (United States) seaboard. Has citations from journals, reports, and collections. Arranged into ethnological and archaeological sections and by tribal name. Includes a correlation of states with tribal groups and a tribal index and synonomy (list of synonyms). Also has political and tribal maps.

913.7 X S678a
Abstracts of New World Archaeology. Society for American Archaeology, Salt Lake City, Ut.: 1959-60.

A set of abstracts on New World archaeology. Use the regionally arranged table of contents and the author index to get proper archaeological citations. Journal articles and reports are the sources for the abstracts.

920 - BIOGRAPHY

920.01 M147

920.01 X B615

An index to biographies. See the professions and occupations section in the back of each issue in order to locate the anthropology biographees.

920.073 N277

A sixty-two-volume set of American biographies. It has an additional fourteen-volume supplementary set. It has been called the most comprehensive American biography. Many prominent American anthropologists are listed. Use the index volume to obtain the right volume and pages. Has photographs.

920.073 V829s
Visher, Stephen Sargent. Scientists Starred, 1903-1943, in American

"A study of collegiate and doctoral training, birthplace, dis-btribution, backgrounds, and developmental influences" of scientists noted in the journal, American Men of Science. Offers data like "anthropologists extent of training by decade of birth" and "anthropologists place of birth by type and decade". This work might be useful for comparative purposes but most of its data seem irrelevant.

920.073 X A512
Bibliography. Madison, Wisc.: University of Wisconsin Press, 1982.

This bibliography of American autobiographies "provides access to over 5,000 American autobiographies published in book form... from 1945-1980". Its subject index accesses anthropologically related information. Look for obvious terms like "anthropology" and "archaeology" and also peruse the entire work. Extensive searching will unearth citations like the memories of Red Fox, a Sioux Chief (p. 182). Has interesting and critical annotations.

920.073 X M442am
Matthews, William. American Diaries in Manuscript, 1580-1954: A Descriptive Bibliography. Athens, Ga.: University of Georgia

A descriptive bibliography of American historical diaries. Covers close to 400 years of American history. Contains information on prominent anthropological figures like Henry Rowe Schoolcraft but it also has the diary citations of lesser-known, more obscure individuals. For instance, the diaries on Justin Rice are cited.
Back in 1842, Rice kept a record of "negotiations with Chipewa Indians at La Pointe, Wisconsin, for extinction of their title to lands in that vicinity". Another entry offers the diary of Paul
M. Ponziglione, S.J., who is a "priest of the Western missions".
A fascinating work worthy of examination for its historical and ethnohistorical contents. A list of institutions holding the diary manuscripts is at the front of the book.
920.073 X M442a 1983

A bibliography of American diaries that expands and revises Matthews' American Diaries in Manuscript, 1580-1954. This is a two-volume set covering the years 1492-1980. It is annotated and, unlike Matthews' work, has a subject index.

920.7 N899

A three-volume biographical dictionary of notable American women. Refer to the subject index for the terms "anthropologists and folklorists" and "Indian women".

920.7 N8992

Similar to the above title. This biographical dictionary of notable American women covers a more modern time period. See the subject index for terms like "anthropology and folklore" and "classics and archaeology" to find biographical citations of female American social scientists.

930 - GENERAL HISTORY OF THE ANCIENT WORLD

930 X Q1

A quarterly checklist of classical studies. Classical archaeology is well represented.

930.03 E56

A learned, illustrated encyclopedia of ancient civilizations. Covers prehistory and emerging and established civilizations. Describes both the Old and New World ancient societies.
930.102573 W749p

An informative guide to American archaeology for the non-professional archaeologist. Gives site descriptions and locations, lists addresses of museums, and gives the names of state archaeologists, archaeology associations, and other data. Arranged geographically.

930.103 C178

An illustrated encyclopedia of archaeology. Gives a comprehensive account of archaeology through the ages. The drawings and photographs are excellent and conform to the text. Of special importance are the chronological atlases at the end of the encyclopedia. These show, among other things, chronologies of the colonization of the world, and the spread of early stone tool industries. Has an extensive bibliography and a subject index. Highly recommended.

932 - EGYPT

932 B162a

A good, illustrated atlas of ancient Egypt. It covers the cultural setting, describes a fictitious journey down the Nile River in those ancient times, and gives an account of everyday Egyptian life. Large sections of the atlas give a fine survey of Classical archaeology and Egyptology. Has a glossary, illustrations list, bibliography, gazetteer, and subject index.

933 - PALESTINE

933.003 N384a

An illustrated encyclopedia of Biblical archaeology. It describes excavations in the area and analyzes the importance of the finds they have yielded". The work is both descriptive and methodological. It has a glossary and chronology.

A scholarly dictionary of terms from classical antiquity. Has material on classical archaeology. Also includes customs of the day.

938.003 P957

An authoritative encyclopedia of classical archaeological sites. Maps and a map index give exact locations of these sites. Limited to Old World archaeology.

940 - HISTORY OF EUROPE

940.1 P757r 1971

A bibliography on medieval Europe. It supplements the journal Cahiers de Civilisation Medievale. It has a good subject index (index des specialisations et de Domaines d'interet). Look for the terms "anthropologie", "anthroponymie", "ethnographie", "archaeologie", "fouilles archaeologie" (archaeological excavations), "folklore", "linguistique", "mythes", and "socologie". Arranged by author. In French.

940.1 x C527R 1959

A two-volume subject-arranged bibliography dealing primarily with the history of the Middle Ages in Europe. See the citations on "archaeologie" and "antiquites". In French.
940.1 X I61

A series of bibliographic guides to medieval studies. Use the subject index to find citations on archaeology, anthropology and folklore.

940.1 X P126g 1980

940.1 X P126g 1908 Suppl.

A supplement to the above guide to medieval history. Has some citations on medieval archaeology and folklore. Refer to the table of contents.

940.1 X Q1

A bibliography of medieval history. Arranged by author. It lacks a subject index. Has occasional pertinent anthropological material. For instance, a citation dealing with the medieval social structure of the city of Lyon was uncovered. Books and brochures are cited.

940.21 X B582

A five-volume bibliography of renaissance culture and history. Use the subject index to get anthropological citations. A few citations were located by using standard anthropological terms but deeper analysis of this work is in order if the user expects to get its full value. For instance, concentrated browsing through the subject index brought forth the topic "Amerique Latine - Missions". This discussed the beginning of the Christian missions in the New World among the indigenous people of Latin America. In French.

940.55 X A512

The editor states that "this bibliography attempts to include all works . . . published in America or by Americans anywhere . . . in the entire field of Slavic and East European studies". Refer to the table of contents and the subject and author arrangement. The sections marked "anthropology", "geography", "archaeology", "linguistics" and "folklore" promise the best material.

941 - HISTORY OF THE BRITISH ISLES

941.073 X B878b

A bibliography of British history spanning the 18th and 19th centuries. There are small sections on anthropology and ethnology (p. 400), classical archaeology (p. 413), and Oriental studies (pp. 414-17). Be sure to look for anthropological material listed under geographical areas. For instance, "New Zealand-Aborigines" (p. 600).

941.5 X Ellg 1980

A bibliography of Irish bibliographies on history. It is arranged by subject and author. Refer to the sections on anthropology (p. 141), archaeology (p. 269), custom and tradition (p. 111), and folklore (p. 112).

941.503 E56

An illustrated encyclopedia on Ireland. The subject index is useful but the table of contents allows more direct access to anthropological writings. See the sections on archaeology, history, language, and the Irish people (especially the part on racial strains and traditional costumes).

An annotated subject bibliography of France. Books are cited, but not journals. See the sections on "archaeology and prehistory", "folklore", "social classes", "social groups", "social change" and "nationalities and minorities". This is a monograph in the World Bibliography Series. In English.

947 - HISTORY OF EASTERN EUROPE, SOVIET UNION

947 X E13

An informative handbook of library resources held in America on the countries in East Central and Southeast Europe. It details the areas of Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Romania, and Yugoslavia. Refer to the area and subject guide of this work for material on anthropology, archaeology, linguistics, and folklore.

947 X H811b

A "bibliography on the political and social sciences and the humanities... limited to titles published in Tsarist Russia, the Soviet Union, and in other countries in the Russian language". Its citations are intelligently and critically annotated. See the chapter on Russian anthropology, pp. 49-57, and refer to the subject index for further anthropological information. A companion work to Russia and the Soviet Union. In English.

947 X H811r

A five-volume set of annotations on Russian reference books. Volumes three and four are lacking. Volume two holds a bibliography of Russian reference works on anthropology, ethnography, physical anthropology, folklore, folk music, and witchcraft. These citations are on pp. 171-88. Archaeology books are on pp. 147-51.

947.003 M465i

An impressive, illustrated encyclopedia about the Soviet Union. Look at sections V, archaeology, and IV, ethnology and linguistics. Has a subject index, fold-out maps, and statistical data.

947.1 X A112b

947.1 X H339f

A classified list of material on Finland and the Baltic states (Estonia, Livonia, Latvia, and Lithuania). The titles reflect the catalog cards at Harvard University Library. Look under such classifications as "ancient religions and mythology" and "social life and customs".
947.71 X W487u

An annotated bibliography of book titles and journal article citations on the Russian Ukraine. See chapters XII, History of the Ukraine; XVII, Ukranian language and literature; and XX, Ukranian social life and customs.

950 - GENERAL HISTORY OF ASIA, ORIENT, FAR EAST

950 X D367

An irregularly published compilation of doctoral dissertations on all facets of Asia. It lacks a subject index but looking carefully through the work will produce titles in all of the sub-disciplines of anthropology.

959 X K39n

An outdated but historically relevant two-volume bibliography on Asia. The information is geographically arranged. Refer to the table of contents for the appropriate anthropology subjects.

A quarterly issued checklist of Oriental studies. There is no subject index but coded letters beside each citation indicate the subject matter. Anthropology and archaeology citations are in this work.

A "select, annotated and graded guide to the authoritative and available works on Japan and Korea". Many of the sources may be out-of-print. Refer to the sections on land and people, language, pre-history, religion and philosophy (especially mythology and religious sects), and social organization and structure (particularly family and kinship organization, personality and national characteristics, and minority communities). An insightful source.

A bibliography of unannotated doctoral dissertations on Asia. These were done between 1933-1962. Use the table of contents to locate anthropological material. A list of master's theses from Cornell University is appended to this work.

A directory to Asian studies centers in Australasia, Europe, and North America. It lists all pertinent information needed about the centers. Many of these centers list anthropology as an area of research interest.

A valuable Chinese bibliography. Anthropological material is scattered throughout this source.
951.003 C718

An indispensible, compact, illustrated encyclopedia on China. See the table of contents for anthropological information. Look especially under the sections "the inhabitants of China", "the continuity of China", and "the mind and senses of China".

951.05 W959c

An illustrated handbook on China. It has three parts. Part one has informational text, part two has documents of modern China, and part three contains statistical and tabular data. Look for the article entitled "Chinese society: stratification, minorities, and family" (pp. 669-90).

951.9 H236 1979

An informative, illustrated handbook on Korea. See the sections called "Land and people" (especially ethnic origins and language), "History" (particularly prehistoric Korea) and " Customs and folklore".

952 - JAPAN

952.003 K76

A nine-volume, illustrated encyclopedia of Japan. Volume nine is the subject index. Thoroughly search the sub-headings in the index to achieve specified knowledge. For instance, looking under the heading "animals" will lead to the sub-heading "animals in Japanese culture" which is background material of anthropological interest. This very important encyclopedia is "the first effort in the world to complete an encyclopedia about Japan in English".
953 - ARABIC HISTORY

953 R768c

A scholarly and demanding encyclopedia of civilization in the Arab East and "the Arab land spread from the Atlantic Ocean to the Taurus Mountains, the Iranian highland, and the Persian Gulf". It is replete with anthropological information. Contains maps and a list of suggested readings on Arab civilization.

953 X S262i

A scholarly bibliography of Muslim history. Has reference and general works and historical bibliographies. This volume is an elaboration of Sauvaget's work by Claude Cahen who has "attempted to extend the range of subjects... and to enter into more detail than did Sauvaget". Refer to part I, sections 8-9, and part II, sections 11-13.

954 - HISTORY OF SOUTH ASIA, INDIA, PAKISTAN

954 X H339s

A listing of the shelflist (library classification arrangement) of the Widener Library of Harvard University. Looking at the outline in the front of this work will guide the user to the many anthropology citations in its pages.

954 X M214i

An annotated bibliography covering many aspects of modern and ancient India. The user must browse through the contents to locate the anthropological data in the work.

954 X P318s

An exhaustive bibliography on South Asia that is packed with archaeological and anthropological citations. The outline of headings on pp. 1-83 will refer the user to appropriate citations.

954 X S562d

An annotated bibliography of doctoral dissertations about South Asia. It covers the time period 1966-1970. See the table of contents and the subject index to locate anthropology citations.

954 X S726

A handbook to manuscripts, archives, theses, and books on South Asia. Has source material on specific nations. See the articles on p. 26, p. 131, p. 143, and pp. 159-201.

954 X S948s

An impressive bibliography on South Asia. It is arranged by country and area and includes India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Tibet, Nepal, Bhutan, Sikkim, and the Indian Ocean islands. Look in each geographical area for the sections on social and cultural geography, settlement geography, and historical geography. These show some anthropological information.

An informative handbook about Indonesia. Has material on the people, history, language, and customs of Java, Bali, Nusa Tenggara, Sumatra, Kalimantan, Celebes, Moluccas, and Irian Jaya. Illustrated.

An annotated bibliography of the Philippine Islands. Arranged by topic. See the table of contents and chapters V, VI, VII, VIII, X, XI, and XV.

960 - GENERAL HISTORY OF AFRICA

960 C968

A monographic atlas of Africa which deals with the physical and cultural backgrounds of each African country. Has a great amount of anthropological material which can be located through the subject index and the text proper. Has a gazetteer. Brilliantly illustrated.

960 L521a

An illustrated handbook which has information on Africa. Divided into two sections - countries and essays. Use the subject index to locate anthropology items. The essays referring to African art and changing cultural patterns are interesting.

960 X A798i

An extensive bibliography and index on Africa. Arranged by subject and country. Covers all fields of anthropology along with related disciplines. It is "a catalogue of articles in Western languages dealing with Africa as published from 1885 to 1965 in periodicals, festschriften, symposia, and proceedings of congresses and conferences".

960 X C976

A quarterly bibliography to current African literature about all countries and regions of that continent. Composed of citations from scholarly research journals, book reviews, and current bibliographies. The subject and regional indexes refer to the anthropological works within the main text.

960 X D837h

An informative guide to museums and galleries having African studies material and located in the United States. See pp. 175-92 for ethnological collections.

960 X E13a

An index to African book reviews in English language publications. As the reviews cover a sixty-year time span, a historical perspective is evident. There is no subject index so the user must browse through this work to find anthropology citations and reviews.

960 X H339a

A listing of African history and literature books on the shelves of Widener Library, Harvard University. Serves as a bibliography for relevant items. Look in the classified listings, particularly those ones on specific races and tribes.

An informative annual South African yearbook. See chapters three through five for the history, people, and linguistics of this country.

968 S785

A twelve-volume, illustrated encyclopedia of South Africa. Has a large amount of data on all sub-fields of anthropology. Some articles have bibliographies. The user should be aware of the unique ideological and historical perspectives that permeate this encyclopedia and of ethnocentricities that might be encountered.

968 X M537m 1957

A two-volume, critically annotated bibliography of South Africa. The chronological and typographical subject indexes (pp. 925-1023 of volume two) will aid in locating appropriate anthropological material. Emphasizes the Afrikaners but there is also a lot of literature on the indigenous South African peoples and tribes. Some ethnocentricities occur. This is an important work because of its well-researched text and its historical contents. A reprint of the earlier 20th century edition.

A guide to South African reference books. See the sections on African language, pp. 28-29; anthropology, pp. 33-34; and archaeology, p. 69.

A historical dictionary on Zimbabwe (formerly Rhodesia). Anthropology subjects are on pp. xix-xxxiv and 369-71. The author is a South Africanist who specializes in the history of the Ndebele people. His scholarship is evident throughout this dictionary.

A monumental, eight-volume critical history of the Americas. Composed of chapter length articles and essays written by experts who are versed American history. Critical notes follow each chapter. Areas studied are the United States, Canada, South and Central America, Mexico, and the Arctic regions. Ethnological and archaeological material is very much a part of the entire set. See the table of contents and the subject index in each volume to find appropriate literature. This work has many fine illustrations. Highly recommended for its historical, ethno-historical, and anthropological viewpoint.

A continuing bibliography of writings on American history. All facets of American life are covered. See the sections on bibliography, historiography, methodology and source guides, history of the American Indians, and oral history. Peripheral anthropological information can be found in the sections on certain geographical areas. Also has a large amount of sociological data. Most of the citations are subject-arranged and are from journal articles.
970.01 B972i

An alphabetical listing of Indian tribal names. Lists the tribes "that roamed the North American continent prior to . . . the white man".

970.1 - INDIANS OF NORTH AMERICA

970.1 D411a

A historical chronology and bibliography covering close to 500 years of the American Indian. It lists events and describes famous Indians of the past and present. Pertinent indexes and appendices complete this useful work.

970.1 G847a

An illustrated book that describes Indian tribes of the continental United States, Canada and Alaska. Lists of Indian tribes follow each chapter. Provides a basis for those wanting to familiarize themselves with tribal nomenclature.

970.1 H638f

A travel guide to Indian America. Dispenses information of value to the tourist. Has scattered and peripheral anthropological data.

970.1 M357g

A guidebook, handbook and directory of the American Indian. It is "a guide into the world of the Indians" where one "may learn something about the major tribes, what kind of people they are, where they live, what they believe, and how to visit them". This work is of use to the non-Native American interested in knowing more about his or her fellow citizens of Indian heritage. Also contains helpful data like calendars of Indian events and lists of Indian museums, organizations, and tribal publications.

970.1 T325a

A highly informative and conveniently used almanac on the prehistoric American Indian. Has archaeological site maps, chronological maps, and lists of linguistic groups.

970.1 X H112i

A valuable guide to library research about the American Indian. Composed of two parts. Part one describes research methodology and strategy. Part two has annotated bibliographic citations on specific Indian tribes. Contains methodology and subjects of interest to anthropologists and ethnohistorians.

970.1 X H688b

A bibliography of contemporary North American Indians. Hodge, an anthropologist, defines the term "contemporary" as "an indefinite period of time beginning about the last quarter of the nineteenth century". He states that "by 1875 almost all Native Americans were well launched upon a course of stabilized, permanent socio-cultural pluralism within the larger white society". This annotated work is exceptional because of the breadth of its anthropological comments and the wryness of its annotations. Contains study guides and lists of Indian owned and run publications. An intriguing and sensitive document.

970.1 X I38

A subject index to literature on the American Indian. Covers Indians of the Western Hemisphere. Arranged by subject and has large sections pertinent to specific tribes. Has a great deal of anthropological and anthropologically related journal article citations. It is unfortunate that this excellent and vital index had such a short life. It was published over a four year period (1970-1973). The hope is that a similar endeavour will be initiated in the future.

970.1 X I39

A two-volume, authoritative, critically annotated bibliography of North American Indians. Has sources of interest to anthropologists and ethnohistorians. The annotations are well-written and give insight into the complete work. See the users guide on p. xvii.
970.1 X M486a

A bibliography of projects, theses and dissertations from Arizona State University and covering the years, 1943-1974. They are all on the American Indian. Contains anthropological material. Arranged by subject.

970.1 X M665a

An annotated bibliography of print and audiovisual sources on the American Indian. Lists Minnesota arts and crafts organizations, speakers bureaux, and service organizations. This bibliography has some books pertaining to anthropology.

970.1 X M974e 1975

An essential ethnographical bibliography of North American Indians. It has five volumes and was compiled by two distinguished social scientists and authorities on cross-cultural research. Volume one contains culture area bibliographic citations and the other four volumes have ethnic bibliographic citations. All of the material is "computer generated and based on a variation of the Human Relations Area Files (HRAF) Automated Bibliographic System (HABS)". The information in this scholarly work is obtained from journal articles, books, and collected papers.

970.1 X N532b

An annotated bibliography and catalog of books from the museum shop of the Museum of the American Indian. Arranged by author. Some of the books deal with anthropology, archaeology, and folklore.
970.1 X T463g

An annotated bibliography and catalog of material housed at an outstanding library of Western history and Americana. Much of the material is on the American Indian and it is arranged by tribe and chronological date. All of the books, manuscripts, maps, pamphlets, and broadsides are non-circulating and can only be looked at within the Gilcrease Library. Has a wealth of anthropological material.

970.1 X U58b

An eight-volume index of the card catalog of the Bureau of Indian Affairs. "It should prove useful to anyone interested in Indian biography, history, and social conditions in the latter half of the nineteenth century and the first part of the twentieth century". Anthropological and ethnohistorical literature is scattered throughout this excellent bibliography.

970.1 X U582n

A dissertation index of literature on the Indians of North America. Use the subject index to locate anthropological dissertation titles. The titles are not abstracted, but the user just has to refer to the accompanying numbers to see where they are located in Dissertation Abstracts International. For instance, a reference to 33/03-b p. 990 means that the annotated work will be in volume 33-B, issue no. 3, p. 990, of Dissertation Abstracts.

970.10202 A512

A reference book of contemporary and historical data on American Indians. Shows location of tribes by state and lists Indian museums with outstanding collections, some of them anthropological in nature.
970.103 L533c

A dictionary of North American Indian tribes. Includes those from Canada, Greenland, and Alaska as well as tribes within the continental United States. Each tribe is given from one to three pages of description. Bibliographies generally follow each description. The dictionary is illustrated, has maps of language groups and culture areas, and shows Indian lands, communities and reservations. Includes an index and glossary.

970.103 R332 1978

A two-volume bibliography, biography and directory of the North American Indian. Includes a biography of Indians and non-Indians active in Indian issues.

970.103 S889d

A dictionary of short definitions of terms relating to American Indians.

970.105 X P957a

A list of journal titles on the American Indian. The journals are located in the Princeton University Library. Some of the titles are anthropological in subject.

970.471 X A152c

An informative, annotated bibliography of Canadian Indians. It covers a wide range of subjects of interest to anthropologists and anthropology students. Has a case law digest relating to Canadian Indian legal questions and discusses specifics on Indian tribes of the sub-Arctic, Northwest coast, Plateau, Plains, and Eastern woodlands. Also has material on the Metis (Indians of mixed white and Indian parentage) and has linguistic maps, cultural maps, and a subject index.

970.471 X N277r

A chronological bibliography (1971-1973) of material on the Canadian Indian protests to a hydro-electric project on the James Bay, which borders on the provinces of Quebec and Ontario. This work gives insight into the social, economic and technical problems affecting traditional native populations. Has applied anthropology implications.
970.4786 X H817p

A tribal and author bibliography of sources on Montana Indians. The data are gathered from government reports, personal correspondence, books, and journals. The contents are a blend of popular and scholarly material.

970.4786 X I39

A computerized bibliography of Montana Indians. The contents, apart from holding some anthropological data, show what can be retrieved by searching computer databases for information. The findings are excerpted from the authoritative bibliography, America: History and Life.

970.479 X S851i

A critical bibliography of the Indians of the Great Basin. This is an area that Stewart considers as "occupied by the Numic speakers in historic times". It describes the prehistory, ethnology, and linguistics of the Shoshonis, Northern Paiutes, Bannocks, Utes, Southern Paiutes, and (although a non-Numic tribe) the Washoes. The text is comprised of descriptions, bibliographic citations, and maps.

970.5 - GOVERNMENT RELATIONS WITH NATIVE RACES

970.5 H645o 1974

A compilation of sketches which provide "brief histories of the field units of the Office of Indian Affairs" between 1824-1880. It gives the names of Indian agents and agencies and has short, descriptive histories. Of ethnohistorical interest.
970.5 U58in 1973
United States. Treaties, etc., the American Indian Treaties Series.

An eight-volume series of treaties between Indian tribes and the U. S. Federal government. The treaties are produced as they were originally written. Of great ethnohistorical and historical value.

970.5 X A375b 1984

An annotated bibliography of economic development and how it affects Indians. Helpful to applied anthropologists.

970.5 X N277c

An exhaustive catalog on Indian law. It is scrupulously arranged by subject, tables of cases, author-title tables, and supplemental material. A very practical source of material about the legal rights of Native Americans. Although there are many listings of interest to applied anthropologists, the section on culture, customs, and traditions should be of particular importance.

970.5 X P971b

A lengthy and scholarly two-volume bibliography on Indian-White relations in the United States. Has a combination of general topics like land reform and specific subjects like the use of peyote in religious ceremonies. There are indexes in both volumes but the table of contents provides surer access to the anthropological literature in this work.

970.5 X S113a Suppl.

A short bibliography of citations from books and law review articles on American Indian law. Can be used as a "basic guide to materials available in the University of New Mexico Law Library..."
collection". Contains some historical and ethnological data, including a section on primitive law.

970.6 - INDIANS OF NORTH AMERICA - MISCELLANY

970.6301412 X G797n

An annotated bibliography of Native American women, past and present. Has an excellent introduction. Many of the citations are anthropological in nature.

970.630776 X T514u

A critical bibliography on historical, ethnological and sociological glimpses of problems and trends in the urbanization of the American Indian.

970.633 X R386b

A selective, annotated bibliography on Indian economic development and the problems associated with it. This work has been compiled "with the goal of helping tribes develop governmental tools essential for the protection and regulation of commercial activities on reservations". It touches on issues of applied anthropology and cultural integrity. The material comes from journal articles, books, federal and state government reports, memoranda, and tribal codes, ordinances and regulations.

970.6333 X S967i

A bibliography on Indian land tenure. It is a scholarly survey on the issue. The history of Indian land ownership is examined from aboriginal occupancy and territoriality to current economic, political and geographical questions on land. The chapter on land tenure and culture change is of particular interest. Has an extensive bibliography, subject and tribal indexes, and maps.

A bibliography on North American Indian mental health. Contains material primarily in the fields of psychology, psychiatry, ethnopsychiatry, ethnopsychology, and culture and personality studies.

An annotated bibliography of Indian folklore. Describes tribal folklore in the Northeast, Southeast, Midwest, Plains, Southwest, Great Basin, California, Northwest coast, Plateau, Sub-Arctic, and Arctic. Folklore is called verbal art and is arranged by tribal group. Has a subject index and an author-translation index.

An important bibliography of Native American alcohol use. Holds works of cross-cultural and applied value. Lists works on alcoholism and the American Indian. It has an excellent subject index which compliments the text. The introduction is incisive.

An author-arranged bibliography on North American Indian Art. Describes crafts, architecture, prehistoric pottery, masks, aboriginal pipes and many other forms of art. Many of its citations are from anthropological sources.

A discography of sound recordings held at the Indiana University Archives of Traditional Music. The collection "documents the history of Native American ethnomusicology, beginning with James Mooney's 1893 field recordings of Plains Indians". Earlier cylinder recordings of Boas, DuBois, and Dorsey are cited. Subject and culture group indexes are provided. The printing is hard to read.

A partially annotated bibliography of Native American poems, traditional narratives, autobiographies, biographies, letters, personal narrative, fiction, humor, and satire. An author-title index and first line index are at the end of this work. Many of the citations have anthropological and folklorical content.

A list of Indian and Eskimo authors. Includes brief descriptions of their works. Some of the material is of linguistical and ethnohistorical value.

A bibliography of Indian writers which covers over 150 years of their literature. Most of the works were meant to be published and include "political essays and addresses, satirical pieces... myths and legends... personal reminiscences, and other genres". Contains anthropological material.
970.6897 X M345a

A comprehensive bibliography of book and article citations on the language and literature of the American Indian. Arranged mainly by geographical format but it does have "four non-geographical sections: bibliography, autobiography, general literature, and general language". Holds a variety of material on anthropological linguistics, ethnology and folklore. Has a subject index.

970.69293 X K59o

A historical and genealogical survey of the origins of Native Americans. Most of the data come from publications and vital statistics of the U. S. government. Ethnohistorical value.

971 - CANADA

971 X H339c

A list of the classification schedules at Widener Library, Harvard University. See the sections on Indian races of Canada, pp. 93-95.

971 X M442c

An interesting, annotated bibliography of Canadian diaries and autobiographies. See the subject index for data on Eskimo life, the fur trade, and Indian life and affairs.

971 X T425b

A bibliography about Canada. It is thoroughly written and easy to use. See the subject index for anthropological material. Refer also to the citations on Canadian Indians and their customs, pp. 49-63.
971.1 X B862d
British Columbia. Provincial Archives Department. Dictionary Catalogue of the Library of Provincial Archive of British Columbia.

An eight-volume catalog of the Library of Provincial Archives, British Columbia. Look at the subject headings for anthropological terms. Refer also to the names of specific Canadian Indian tribes.

971.1 X E26b
Edwards, Margaret H. and John C. R. Lort. A Bibliography of British Columbia: Years of Growth, 1900-1950. Victoria: Social Sciences
Research Centre, University of Victoria, 1975.

A geographically oriented bibliography on the growth of British Columbia through the first half of the 20th century. Most ethnological and linguistic data are found by looking at the subject index or looking up the names of specific Indian tribes.
Archaeological literature can be located under the terms "Fraser midden" and "kitchen middens". See the companion bibliography to this work A Bibliography of British Columbia: Laying the Foundations, 1849-1899.

971.1 X L922b
Lowther, Barbara Joan. A Bibliography of British Columbia: Laying the Foundations, 1849-1899. Victoria, B.C.: University of Victoria, 1968.

A bibliography of early British Columbia history. Anthropological citations are in the subject index under the term "Indians". For later British Columbia history see A Bibliography of British Columbia: Years of Growth, 1900-1950.

971.23 X D515b
Dew, Ian F., comp. Bibliography of Material Relating to Southern Alberta Published to 1970. Lethbridge, Alb.: University of Lethbridge Learning Resources Centre, 1975.

A bibliography about Southern Alberta. See the material on native people, pp. 1-42.
972 - MIDDLE AMERICA, MEXICO

972.003 E56 1976
Encyclopedia de Mexico. 2nd ed. Ciudad, Mex.: Instituto de la

A twelve-volume, illustrated encyclopedia of Mexico. Has articles on anthropology, archaeology, indigenous people, and other related subjects. Lacks a subject index. In Spanish.

972.9 - WEST INDIES (PUERTO RICO)

972.95 X D724d
Dossick, Jesse John. Doctoral Research on Puerto Rico and Puerto

A short bibliography of doctoral dissertations about Puerto Rico and its inhabitants. See the sections on anthropology, archaeoology, language, and sociology. Not annotated.

973 - UNITED STATES

973 X A5124

An eleven-volume index to journal article citations on American history. Approach the data on a subject basis. Look for the standard anthropological, archaeological and linguistical terms.
Covers the period 1958-1968.

973 X A5125

A ten-volume set that indexes and abstracts American history.
Locate the section called "Indians: general-ethnology". Also look at the extensive subject index which delves deeply into American history and will yield anthropological research citations.
973 X A51251

A bibliography on American history. Use the subject index as an entry to the abstracts in the text. See the section on Indians.
Continues America, History and Life.

973 X A51252
America, History and Life. Part B: Index to Book Reviews. Santa Barbara, Calif.: American Bibliographical Center-CLIO Press, 1974-

An index to book reviews of American history. Refer to America, History and Life. Part D: Annual Index in order to get a subject approach to these reviews. Look for anthropology subjects. A Continuation of America, History and Life.

973 X A51253
America, History and Life. Part C: American History Bibliography.
Santa Barbara, Calif.: American Bibliographical Center-CLIO Press, 1974-

A source of history bibliographies on the United States. For a subject index to its contents (including anthropological bibliographics), refer to America, History and Life. Part D: Annual Index. A continuation of America, History and Life.

973 X A51254
America, History and Life. Part D: Annual Index. Santa Barbara, Calif.: American Bibliographical Center-CLIO Press, 1974-

An annual subject and author index to parts A, B, and C of American, History and Life. All anthropological disciplines are represented.

973 X B415b 1942-1978
Beers, Henry Putney. Bibliographies in American Histories, 1942-1978:
Guide to Materials for Research. Woodbridge, Conn.: Research

A two-volume bibliography of bibliographies on American history.
Covers bibliographies published between 1942-1978. See the subject index in volume two to locate the anthropological and anthropologically-related bibliography titles. This work continues Beers' 1938 publication.
973 X B858c

A reprint of an annotated 19th century book catalog of the private library of Mr. George Brinley. It is a two-volume sale catalog. Look at the sections on American Indians (for their origin, history, manners and customs) and Indian-White relations in New England.

973 X C287gu

A two-volume bibliography of sources of American history and civilization in the collections of libraries and other institutions in New York City. References manuscripts, books and journals. Use the subject index and the table of contents. Look for works on the American Indian, science (archaeology), and social sciences (ethnology).

973 X C343h

An annotated, chronological history of the United States from European colonization of the New World to the post World War II era. Most of the important anthropological citations are on Native Americans. Has a subject index.

973 X H236h

A two-volume, comprehensive bibliography on American history by a distinguished historian. See volume one, pp. 459-70 for anthropological material on American Indians. Has a subject index.

973 X H525g

A bibliographical guide for historical manuscripts in the collection of the Huntington Library, a major private research library. Most of the appropriate material is located under the subject "Indians of North America".

973 X K56a 1974

A subject bibliography of books on American ethnic groups. See the part on the American Indian, pp. 25-42. Includes fiction and non-fiction.

973 X R234b

A six-volume bibliography on historical organization methods and practices. It is a practical work that dispenses information of value to the anthropologist, archaeologist, and folklorist. Refer to: volumes one, historic preservation; two, conservation of collections (especially artifacts, p. 80); four, documentation of collections (particularly folk arts and crafts, pp. 163-70); and six, research (see archaeological research and cultural resources management, pp. 46-65).

973 X U58g

An annotated bibliography of "representative books reflecting the development of American life and thought". Refer to chapters VII for ethnohistorical and archaeological data on American Indians, and XXIV for material on folklore, folk music, and folk art.

973.03 A214d 1976

An eight-volume encyclopedic dictionary of American history. It carries article length essays which are followed by lists of suggested readings. The subject index to this work indicates that anthropological material is found throughout the encyclopedia. Those interested in ethnohistorical material on the American Indian should refer to volume III, pp. 355-405. This publication is a revised edition of the 1940 title of the same name.
973.04 X W985e

An annotated filmography of audiovisual material on ethnic Americans. Locate pp. 44-47 for material of anthropological interest.

978 - WESTERN UNITED STATES

978 X D416c

An eight-volume catalog of western history holding material from "printed books and pamphlets, government documents... and some serials". Many anthropological works can be found by browsing through the titles and subjects.

978 X I18c

A regional bibliography and checklist of western American history. Look for the subject, "Indians of North America" in the subject index. It will lead to materials of ethnological and ethno-linguistical content.

978 X N534c

An annotated catalog of western Americana from a specialized collection at the Newberry Library, an important private research library. Contains many items of ethnological and historical interest, although many of the commentaries are from non-Indians. Has a subject index.
978 X P324f

A bibliography of the frontier and the American West. See pp. 16-25 to obtain the occasional anthropological citation on American Indians.

978 X P977c

A catalog of western history research. Contains anthropological, archaeological and linguistic material but these can only be found by browsing.

978 X S686d 1960
Soliday, George W. A Descriptive Checklist, together with Short Title Index, describing almost 7,500 Items of Western Americana. New York: Antiquarian Press, 1960.

A commercial book catalog of the volumes housed in the George W. Soliday Library in Seattle, Washington. It covers western American history. Many of the titles are annotated. This work has a number of personal narratives and reminiscences, several being anthropological or ethnohistorical in content. The subject index will aid the user in locating appropriate information.

978 X Y18ca

A catalog of western American history at Yale University. It is arranged by author, subject and title in a single alphabet. Has myriad anthropological, archaeological, and linguistic citations.

978.003 R286

An illustrated encyclopedia of the American West. Has descriptive passages on Indian tribes, languages and archaeology.
979 - GREAT BASIN & PACIFIC SLOPE REGION OF THE U. S. PACIFIC COAST STATES

979 X W319d

A six-volume dictionary catalog of the Pacific Northwest collection in the University of Washington Libraries. A thorough search of its contents will reveal a broad range of anthropological topics. Arranged by subject, author and title in one alphabet.

979.4 X E26d

A delightful, annotated bibliography of southwestern and California deserts. The descriptions are critical and intelligently phrased. See the title index in order to get to the anthropology citations.

979.6 X N428i

A bibliography that "consists of books and pamphlets relating to the history and description of Idaho". Has some pertinent ethnological material, much of it dealing with the Lewis and Clark expedition. Refer to the title index to locate anthropology citations.

979.7 X H6732

A two-volume bibliography of Washington state records. Consists of public and private documents. Use the subject index in volume two to gain anthropological and ethnohistorical data.

A guide to the nomination process to the National Register of Historic Places. Describes preservation law, nomination processes, cultural inventories, and archaeological site listings. Includes a bibliography.

980 - SOUTH AMERICA

An old bibliography of Latin America. Arranged by country. Look under the subject "antiquities".

A bibliography of social science sources about Latin America for the time period 1967-1979. Includes many anthropological citations. Occasionally omits important literature. For example, Oscar Lewis’ book, A Study of Slum Culture: Backgrounds for La Vida (an ethnography of Puerto Rican slum conditions and culture), is not listed in the subject index under "squatters, slums, and marginal populations". This work was published during the years the bibliography covers. Yet this is still a valuable list of sources for Latin Americanists.

A significant guide and bibliography to historical literature of Latin America. Note in particular part III in which archaeological, ethnological and ethnohistorical citations are listed.

A bibliography of bibliographies about Latin America. See the sections on anthropology, archaeology and related fields. Has a more extensive 1976 edition.

980 X G876b1

A two-volume bibliography whose "aim is to present bibliographical information published in Latin American periodicals and in periodicals published elsewhere with specific references to Latin America through 1965". Has sections on anthropology, archaeology, folklore, Indian languages, art and music, and acculturation. This is a companion piece to Gropp's earlier 1968 bibliography. The user should also refer to the 1979 supplement edited by Daniel Raposo Cordeiro.

980 X H236
Handbook of Latin American Studies. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1936-.

A comprehensive, continuing handbook of Latin American studies. Later volumes are separated into social sciences handbooks and humanities handbooks. The social science volumes have material on anthropology, biological anthropology, archaeology, ethnology, and anthropological linguistics. The humanities volumes contain literature on folklore, history (especially ethnohistory), ethnomusicology, and art (particularly pre-Columbian and folk art). There is a subject index in each handbook. This long-standing publication deserves scrutiny by Latin Americanists and anthropologists in general.

980 X H927L

A guide to English language literature on Latin American history. See section VI, "ancient peoples and cultures".
980 X L357

A short run of a bibliographical journal devoted to Latin America. See sections A-1 anthropology, B-4 folklore, B-5 linguistics, B-7 music, and B-9 religion.

980 X S117g

A two-volume, annotated bibliography of Latin American studies. See the parts dealing with anthropology, pp. 122-38; arts and crafts, pp. 157-66; folklore, pp. 279-92; and languages, pp. 358-73. Also refer to the subject index in volume two. This is a resumption of Latin America in Periodical Literature. In Spanish and English.

990 - OCEANIA

990 X T239p 1965

An excellent subject bibliography of Oceania. There is a multitude of anthropological citations covering all aspects of the discipline. It gives generous treatment to each sub-discipline. Cites books and monographs, journal articles, reports and manuscripts. Suitable for browsing or finding material through the table of contents or subject index. Highly recommended.

990.03 H673

An encyclopedic, historical dictionary of Oceania. Refer to the subject index for anthropological material. Has information on pre-European culture, Austronesian languages and culture, cargo cults, and indigenous folklore. Describes Margaret Mead's fieldwork in the Admiralty Islands. Consists of article length essays. Includes maps.
993 - NEW ZEALAND

993.1 E56

A three-volume illustrated encyclopedia of New Zealand. Refer in particular to the literature concerning the Maori.

994 - AUSTRALIA

994.003 A938 1977

A six-volume illustrated encyclopedia of Australia. Refer to the lengthy article on Australian aborigines in volume one. Lacks an index.
CONCLUSION

A large number of anthropological or anthropologically-related items were located throughout the reference collection and incorporated within the bibliography. This was indicated by the occurrence of data across the wide sweep of Dewey Decimal numbers and subjects. What is the significance of this circumstance? Several reasons may explain the pervasiveness of anthropology across the spectrum of knowledge. One element might be due to the nature of anthropology and the way anthropologists practice their art, science, and profession. They naturally incorporate material from other disciplines while working out their own theories. Obviously, the same statement could be applied to practitioners from other disciplines, but there is some doubt whether scholars from these other subject areas work under the same framework as do anthropologists. Anthropology is the systematic study of humankind; anthropologists study all facets of human endeavour, behavior, accomplishments, failures, and characteristics in the course of their researches (Haviland, 1974: 6-7). This gives an overview, or conspectus, of the human condition that is not usually accorded other social scientists, scientists, or humanists. The word "anthropology" comes from the Greek word "anthropos" (man) and "logia" (study) (Encyclopedia of Anthropology, 1976: 12). It also can be noted that anthropology from the Greek and humanity from the Latin are near synonyms (Bessac, 1986).

The anthropologist in the field or the laboratory draws upon the social, archaeological, linguistic, and physical aspects of his or her discipline. A researcher studying East African pastoralists, for example, might, in course of his or her inquiries, investigate historical data, dietary elements, economic strategies in arranging marriages, ecological factors such as rainfall, insect manifestations related to tribal livelihood, linguistic and psychic factors bearing on the cosmos of the society or culture, ethnoarchaeological insights that might be applied to contemporary tribal behavior, and urgent applied considerations such as the dissolution of ethnic boundaries by urbanization, or the effect on the tribe of decreased grazing ranges due to the encroachment of agriculturalists abetted by uninformed decisions of government bureaus.

Such research could draw on the disciplines of history, medicine, social and land economics, sociology, genealogy, religion, language, law, environmental studies, meteorology, public administration, entomology, parasitology, conflict management, agronomy, geology, soil analysis, paleobotany, ceramics, and other fields of knowledge which, combined with the anthropological perspective, could add further insight into the culture.

The scope of anthropological research allows the investigator to seek unlimited references to unlimited knowledge in relationship to the anthropological study at hand. This is where the breadth of anthropology resides (Mandelbaum, Lasker, and Albert, 1963: 5) and this, in a sense, indicates the catholic attributes of the subject. The discipline has built up formidable theoretical and applied underpinnings and there are accepted, contested, and changing elements in its body of knowledge as there are in other areas of study. The uniqueness of anthropology is that, apart from its own recorded knowledge, it can borrow, indeed it is expected to borrow, and synthesize components of information from other branches or systems of learning. This process buttresses the formal, intellectual progress of anthropology and provides the vitality and dynamism necessary for its evolution.

Another cause for the prevalence of anthropology and anthropological material across the fields of knowledge is that, combined with its natural cross-disciplinary aspects, relevant knowledge of and about the races of the world is now more easily gained and is more available. When anthropology was in its infancy as a formally recognized science, the late nineteenth-century age of exploration was in full bloom. Boas was embarked on field work in the Arctic wastes of Baffin Island (Boas, 1966: 503-16) and even non-anthropologists, such as Amundsen, were recording ethnographies during the course of their journeys (Huntford, 1986: 100-04). Many months passed and sometimes years were spent before these ethographical studies were published or were made available for the perusal of their colleagues or the academic world in general.

That state of affairs differed from the present position because global access nowadays is, by comparison, relatively routine and usually devoid of hardships and dangers. Also, research results are in print and disseminated at a much faster pace. In considering the increasingly sophisticated and near instantaneous means whereby anthropological subject matter can be obtained, it must be realized that there is more material from more sources giving a greater scope to anthropological literature. This enviable situation is ameliorated by the sheer mass of data and, realistically, their incapability of ever being seen or read, much less inculcated by those wishing to be informed. From a paucity of data we have gone to a plethora of data.
However, there are new data gathering and deciphering skills and methods which allow greater manipulation and maneuverability in the reviewing of massive amounts of literature.

An example is the employment of computers to locate, correlate, analyze, and retrieve information. Another instance, one of great importance to bibliographical research, is the use of multi-subject data banks whose contents can be examined through elements of Boolean logic. This mnemonic process is designed to excerpt pertinent information from enormous amounts of literature by linking appropriate terms and nomenclature and generating immediate lists and bibliographies on the subject area under question. Innovations like these expand the capacity for receiving information and give an eclectic body of knowledge like anthropology a much greater subject facility.

The question still lingers as to the significance of these reasons to the present study. Is this pervasiveness a curse or a blessing as we deal with anthropological literature? Obviously we are blessed with a surfeit of information. This situation allows greater latitude in dealing with anthropological problems and frames new questions about the human condition. It must also be understood that the complexity of data and the need for their consolidation present logistical and methodological problems (National Academy of Science, National Academy of Engineering, 1966: 227), raise concerns about unassimilated data (Kaufmann, 1981: 425), and allow for the unfortunate entropy that can accompany the growth of research (Weinberg, 1967: 40-41).

These are epistemological questions, but they still bring us back to the fact that, although we can quickly find relevant material, we can consistently lose its benefit because it cannot easily be extracted from the bulk of surrounding knowledge. Such information is frequently buried within other literature which might not immediately be seen as relevant to the research or investigation extant. It is shadow literature. Even taking into cognizance the uniquely individual mental template of the researcher and the special ways in which he or she conducts scholarly investigations (Wilson, 1983: 8-9), there appears to be a need to find ways to extend such searching capabilities and develop more far-seeing views of literature existing across subject lines. This is especially true with an open-ended and synthesizing discipline like anthropology.

It is suggested that the eclectic bibliography within this thesis (eclectic in the range and variety of subjects, but not unsystematic in the method of extracting such data), gives the user a means of locating and assimilating anthropological material that seems to be unavailable in the regular anthropological bibliographies. In a small way, this approach might make more tolerable the historical and contemporary failure of library subject classification schemes to address the full, magnificent scope of anthropology. The social sciences lack the taxonomic precision of, say, a Lamarckian classification system. The position of anthropology as a young science in the late nineteenth-century coincided with the establishment of a library classification scheme, the Dewey Decimal system, which expanded subject coverage but could not accommodate, nor could be expected to accommodate, the scattered nature of anthropological topics.

Perhaps this work represents a modest step in helping to unfold the anthropological link to all aspects of human knowledge and human behavior. It is more fervently wished that it provides greater access to the grand array of thought represented by anthropology.
